Republican Party 'Ally' Of U. S. Reds, Truman Says

President Sees Nation's Security Damaged by GOP's 'Reckless Acts'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 28.—President Truman, in a counter-attack on Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, charged today that the Republican Party was the "unwitting ally" of Communists in the United States.

"The Republicans ought to realize," he said, "that their reckless acts are not helping our national security; they are hurting our national security."

Communists, Mr. Truman said, are backing Henry Wallace and his third party because they want to take votes away from the Democratic ticket, and thus elect a Republican President.

"The Communists," he continued, "want a Republican Administration, because they think that its reactionary policies will lead to the confusion and strife on which communism thrives.

"The Communists hate the Democratic Administration because of this country's strong foreign policy, and because the economic and social gains which we have put through make it impossible for them to make any progress in this country."

He pointed out that the Communist Party showed its greatest strength in the United States during the Hoover Administration, when it polled 700,000 votes in the 1932 election.

Speaking here in Oklahoma City, where Alfred E. Smith denounced the bigotry of the Ku Klux Klan 20 years ago, Mr. Truman was answering the charge of Governor Dewey, his Republican rival, that the Democratic Administration has been harboring and giving "aid and comfort" to Communists in Washington.

The Chief Executive did not back down an inch on his earlier statement that the Capitol Hill spy hearings were a "red herring" to divert attention from the failure of Congress to do something about high prices, housing and other domestic problems.

He was strictly on the offensive today. On the way here, speaking to large and enthusiastic crowds from the platform of his campaign train, he promised that he would "tear 'em apart."

The Democratic National Committee thought so much of the Oklahoma City speech that it reached into its hard-hit treasury and paid for broadcasts over two of the great radio networks.

"Listen to my speech over the radio," Mr. Truman told the crowds

Steelworkers Vote To Indorse Truman

Pittsburgh, Sept. 28 (AP). President Philip Murray of the CIO-United Steelworkers of America said today the 33-member international executive board of the union has voted unanimously to indorse Harry S. Truman for President and Alben W. Barkley for Vice President.

Truman Gets Right Dope From Horse's Mouth

Ardmore, Okla., Sept. 28 (AP).—President Truman proved his Missouri background today to the satisfaction of a group of Ardmore Roundup Club members.

The President was met by several cowboys on horses alongside his private car on the train. He shook hands with Clyde Wyond and admired his Palomino pony.

The President, the son of a former Missouri mule trader, opened the animal's mouth like an expert.

"Six years old," he said.

"Correct," Wyond replied.

Justice Black's Ruling

Writ Barring Rep. Johnson From Texas Ballot Is Stayed

By The Associated Press

Justice Hugo Black of the Supreme Court ruled in effect yesterday that the name of Representative Lyndon Johnson (D., Tex.) should be on the Texas ballot as Democratic nominee for U. S. Senator.

The justice stayed a temporary injunction which had been issued in Texas keeping Johnson's name off the November ticket.

Black acted after a four-hour hearing in which he heard counsel for Johnson and his runoff primary opponent, Coke Stevenson, former Texas Governor. Black is in charge of the Fifth Appeals Court Circuit of which Texas is a part. One of the Fifth Circuit judges recently declined to stay the injunction.

Justice Black specified that his stay would remain in effect until the full Supreme Court had had an opportunity to consider the dispute between Johnson and Stevenson.

The court holds its next meeting on October 4. Black did not indicate whether the full court would consider the matter, but said if it did it might act on October 4. The election takes place in November.

[Dispatches from Texas have said that October 3 is the final date for preparation of the State ballot.—Editor's Note.]

Stevenson got the injunction after the State Democratic convention found Johnson the winner by 87 votes out of about one million counted.

Explaining his views at the end of the hearings, the justice stated: "It's the universal rule in the United States that before a court interferes with an election there must be a statute clearly authorizing it.

"There is no statutory justification of a Federal court enjoining the steps of an election. I'm going to grant a stay until the full Supreme Court has an opportunity to consider the matter—if it wants to consider it."

1 Fired, 21 Quit, 93 Pending

143 of 258 FSA Employes Cleared of Disloyalty Charges

Federal Security Administrator Oscar A. Ewing yesterday revealed that 258 employes of that agency have been accused of being Communists or fellow-travelers.

One employe has been dismissed, he told the Senate Investigating Committee; 21 resigned before charges were brought against them, and 143 have been cleared because the charges have been found by the FSA Loyalty Board to be "frivolous."

Ninety-three cases are still pending, he said. Charges have been filed in 77 of these. Of the 77, 4 employes have been suspended because of the seriousness of the charges. No action has yet been taken in the remaining 16 cases.

Ferguson Questions "Delay"

Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) of the committee demanded that Ewing explain the "apparent delay" with which the cases have been handled. Ewing replied that he had not "physically had the time to read" all the loyalty check files.

In reply to further questioning by Ferguson about the standards the FSA Loyalty Board employed, Ewing said that if an employe was found to be a member of any of organizations listed by Attorney General Tom Clark as subversive, it was considered grounds for dismissal.

One organization was an exception to that rule, he said. That was membership in the Washington Book Shop, which Clark once branded as Communist front.

Employes who belonged to that organization, Ewing said, were given the benefit of the doubt if they were listed as members of no other "subversive" group.

"Many joined the Washington Book Shop," he said, "just to get books cheaply. But a man couldn't belong to any of those others without having a subversive intent."

Ewing Outlines Policy

Much of the evidence submitted by the FBI to the loyalty board, Ewing said, came from witnesses who wouldn't give their names, swear to their statements, or appear at the hearing.

"Those that look serious," he said, "I review personally."

"If a favorable report has been made, how can any of them appear serious?" Ferguson asked.

"There are some I want to go into, even if the board didn't recommend dismissal," Ewing replied. The board, he added, "has tried to make an honest determination if a man is sympathetic to communism."

"Is sympathy with communism enough to remove him?" Ferguson queried.

"Yes," the witness responded. "We are doing as careful a job as we can to get Commies out of the agency."

Ewing's testimony came in the course of the committee's investigation of a row between him and Dr. John W. Studebaker, former Commissioner of Education. Stude-

Reds Govern Electric Union, Probers Told

Organizer, Mute to Communist Query, Calls Hartley 'Evil'

A self-described former Communist told Congressmen yesterday that the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO) is "the largest Communist-dominated organization in the United States."

A House Labor subcommittee received that testimony from James J. Conroy, who said he used to belong to the union and for about six years was a member of the Communist Party. The House group is conducting an inquiry into Communist influence in labor unions.

James J. Matles, director of organization for the UE union, was called to the stand immediately. He refused to tell whether he is or ever was a Communist, basing his refusal on constitutional grounds.

Matles declared, however, that Conroy "is lying."

"Conroy comes from the gutter," Matles told Chairman Kersten (R., Wisc.). "He is a management man who tried to wreck our union.

"He stands for everything that is evil, just like you do, Mr. Chairman."

Matles declared that for him to answer the committee's question "would betray my people and my union."

Conroy told the committee that "the real leaders" of the union are Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer, and Matles. He said that Albert J. Fitzgerald, the union's president, is just "a front man."

He also said that Emspak was known as "Comrade Juniper."

Conroy listed what he said were three principal objectives of the UE leadership and the Communist Party:

"The damnation of the European Recovery Program and the United States' foreign policy."

"The vitriolic condemnation of conscription and any action taken to safeguard this country against attack."

"The mobilization of the union membership behind the candidates of the Progressive Party.

Although Conroy called the Electrical Union "Communist dominated," he declared that 99 per cent of its 600,000 members are "loyal to their God and their country."

Negro's Rights Upheld

Atlanta's School Salaries Are Ruled Discriminatory

Atlanta, Sept. 28 (AP).—A Federal Court judge ruled today the Atlanta school board had discriminated against Negro teachers "on account of race or color."

The ruling came on a five-year-old suit charging the school board with salary inequalities based on racial discrimination.

Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood said the Negro teachers were "entitled to the relief sought."

"The court disclaims any power to fix the salaries of the teachers," the judge's opinion said. "That is the right and within the province of the defendants. The court only decrees that the salaries may not, when so fixed, be discriminatory of color or race."

The judge said a declaratory judgment and injunction in accordance with his ruling will be forthcoming.

"The court realizes that a readjustment of salaries will be a difficult task and will require time and patience so that the injunctive relief granted will be stayed a reasonable time to permit compliance by the defendants," Judge Underwood said.

The following average monthly salaries were listed:

Classification	White	Negro
High school principals	$340	$240
Elementary principals	$254.15	$167.53
High school teachers	$198.45	$145.65
Elementary teachers	$160.19	$112.38

The opinion said the average years of education for white teachers was 17.85 and that of Negroes, 17.67.

Can't Bully U. S., Dewey Tells Russia

Candidate Warns Leaders America 'Won't Compromise, Endanger Freedom'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Missoula, Mont., Sept. 28.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey circled the northwest tip of the Nation today on double-track rails, but with a single-track notice to Russia.

At Spokane, Wash., and again tonight in Missoula, he warned Soviet leaders they cannot browbeat America.

"We will not compromise our principles. There is no peace in that and we will not endanger our freedom," he said.

To our representatives in Paris he repeated the pledge he has broadcast in many forms from nine States: As a united people, we stand shoulder-to-shoulder with them.

With one deviation, he hammered out the same promise to press reclamation, water power and other Western projects to strengthen America's hand against any world events. The variation was this: in Missoula he touched sparingly on the volatile labor issue with a one-line promise that he failed to spell out.

"We are determined," he said, "to go forward to win increased security and incentives not only for those who work in our mines, but for all labor throughout the Nation."

Governor Dewey's increasing absorption in the international situation is believed to reflect the gravity of his confidential reports from John Dulles in Paris. In recent days, communication between Dulles and Dewey has been entirely in teletype. Earlier telephone contacts have been discarded for security reasons, it was learned.

Pleas by some local politicians for more "slugging" on domestic issues were being all but ignored by Dewey. After 10 days on the road his strategists are convinced that the type of campaign he is conducting, thin as it may be in sensational news, is the best route to public confidence and November victory. They were particularly cheered by reports from local leaders in Washington State, long a Democratic stronghold. This is one of the few States where Henry Wallace may cut deeply enough into the Democratic strength to give a really important boost to Dewey prospects.

In Montana, they picked up more good news. There, Tom J. Davis, 51-year-old Butte lawyer and a newcomer to politics, is giving Senator James Murray (D., Mont.) the race of his life. Davis is former president of Rotary International and counsel for Butte Mine Union No. 1. Senate campaign advisers aboard rate him the GOP's best hope to grab off a Democratic Senate seat.

In his first major speech in Montana at Missoula tonight, Governer Dewey spoke more gravely than ever of the "dark cloud" over Europe and our own future.

"A ruthless aggression that has mankind's enslavement as its goal is abroad in the world," he said. "In Berlin, where by solemn agreement we have every right to be, we are confronting that aggressive power, face to face." He said our representatives in Paris working closely with the leaders of other free nations "are laboring mightily against great odds to bring

Russia's 5th Column Menace Exceeds Hitler's, Spaak Says; Soviet Hints U. N. May Split

Red Press Sees Possibility of Two Camps Going Separate Ways

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Soviet press said today British Foreign Secretary Bevin's speech to the United Nations raised the possibility of two camps within the U. N. going separate ways.

A Tass dispatch from Paris informed the Russian people for the first time that the East-West dispute over Berlin is to be appealed to the Security Council.

The dispatch, printed in all Russian papers, made no comment on the development over Berlin, but carried prominently comment on Bevin's speech.

A Tass dispatch quoted Bevin as telling the Assembly on Monday that Britain may have to depend on regional pacts "if we cannot continue on a world basis, as we hope."

"This thesis of Bevin's is not difficult to decipher," said the dispatch. "It is a preparation for completion of the schism of the United Nations."

The Tass dispatch nowhere hinted that the U. S. S. R. might withdraw from the United Nations.

Tass accused the Western powers of putting into effect "unconcealed military preparations," and declared Bevin's speech was an effort to "cover up their refusal to accept the Soviet proposal for a one-third cut this year in big power armaments.

Tass accused Bevin of "crude falsifications" when he quoted Lenin to the effect that a series of conflicts would take place between the Soviet Republics and bourgeois states.

Britain Awaiting Russian Reaction

London, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Britain is waiting to hear whether Russia still believes that "frightful collisions" between the eastern and western worlds cannot be avoided, a Foreign Office spokesman said today.

The Foreign Office spokesman said Britain is waiting to see whether Russia will react to Foreign Secretary Bevin's statement on Lenin, and, if so, how—would she repudiate Lenin, founder of the Soviet state, or would she admit that an East-West clash is inevitable?

Appeal Expected Today

West Reported Asking U. N. To Revise Berlin Rule Setup

Paris, Sept. 28 (AP).—The three Western powers will ask the United Nations Security Council to establish a new setup in Berlin on the ground the Soviet blockade threatens peace, a French spokesman said tonight.

The French spokesman said three identical letters were drafted and they will be sent to Secretary-General Trygve Lie Wednesday. The notes cite Articles 39 and 40 of Chapter 7 of the U. N. Charter.

Article 40 gives the Security Council power to establish a provisional (temporary) arrangement in disputed areas, and calls upon the parties to the dispute to respect such an arrangement until there is a settlement.

Originally the notes were scheduled to be delivered to Lie today. But instead, the day was spent in drafting a 30-page annex documenting the history of the four-power talks.

A British spokesman said the letters would be tagged with a request for urgent consideration.

[The United Press said the Foreign Ministers had decided not to make their complaint "urgent" and thus three days must pass before the Council can take it up. It is expected to come up Saturday or Monday, the U. P. said.]

Monetary Fund Warning

Many Nations Do Too Little About Inflation, Report Says

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The International Monetary Fund warned its member nations yesterday that many countries in Europe, Asia and Latin America had not yet put their financial houses in order.

The annual report of the 47-nation Fund, set up at Bretton Woods in 1944, singled out France and Italy among the European countries where governments had not done enough last year to keep inflation in check.

Unless inflation is tackled with more determination, the report declared, and unless many countries improve their efficiency and cut their production costs, the whole course of world recovery will be affected.

The warning was reinforced yesterday morning in a speech by Camille Gutt, managing director of the $7,970,000,000 Fund, to his board of governors, representing governments all over the world. In Gutt's audience were half a dozen Ministers of Finance and 16 heads of central banks.

"The basic job of placing each country in a position to restore its international payments," said Gutt, "is one for which the government of each country has a primary responsibility.

"That government alone can take the measures to expand its output and to place production on an efficient basis. That government alone can put its domestic finances in order, and thus prevent a chronic dependence on excessive imports or a chronic difficulty in supplying adequate exports."

Later, the warnings of the report and of Gutt's speech were indorsed by eight of the governors who spoke at an afternoon meeting. Pierre Mendes-France of France, a country which is one of the worst sufferers from inflation and high prices, agreed it was up to each country to put its house in order, although he said the present was a transitional period in which some countries were bound to have extreme difficulties.

The only apparent dissension of the day came when Czechoslovak and Yugoslav delegates objected to a passage in the Fund's report indorsing the European Recovery Program.

Speaking for countries which have declared open warfare on ERP, Obren Blagojevic of Yugoslavia and Jozef Goldmann of Czechoslovakia said it had political purposes, and its indorsement by the Fund would have political implications. They also complained that the Fund's annual report paid too little attention to the countries of eastern Europe, and to the need of developing East-West trade.

Gutt answered them by saying that the Fund of course was in favor of expanding trade everywhere, including trade between

Indians Win; Bosox, Yanks 2 Games Back

Contenders Dealt Crushing Blows By Nats, Macks

After Boston and New York suffered stunning defeats yesterday afternoon the gleeful Cleveland Indians went out last night and pummeled the last-place Chicago White Sox, 11 to 0, to clarify the American League pennant picture.

The Cleveland victory, behind Gene Bearden, put the Indians two full games in front of the Yanks and Bosox, whose chances now—with only four games remaining for each club—are about as bright as that of the average fan trying to get a World Series ticket.

It was Washington that rose up to all but put the damper on Boston's flag hopes with a 4-2 victory behind the six-hit pitching of Ray Scarborough. Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics virtually eliminated the Yankees with a 5-2 triumph over Vic Raschi, New York ace who had boasted an eight-game winning streak against the A's.

3 Killed in Crash Of Superfortress On Aleutian Isle

Anchorage, Alaska, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Three airmen were killed and 10 others survived when an Air Force B-29 Superfortress crashed and burned in landing on Shemya Island, on the western tip of the Aleutian chain, the Alaska Air Command announced today.

The three victims were trapped in the flaming wreckage and were burned beyond recognition. The plane, attached to the 375th weather observation unit at Ladd Field at Fairbanks, Alaska, was completely destroyed, officials said, as it came in for a landing.

Officials said an engine failed and the plane plunged onto the runway and immediately caught fire.

The plane was on a routine weather observation flight.

Belgian Tells U. N. Soviet Policy Is More 'Audacious' Than the Czars'

Paris, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Russia has fifth columns in every United Nations country, which make Adolf Hitler's Nazis look like Boy Scouts, Premier Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium told the U. N. Assembly today.

Defending the western European alliance which Russia complains is aimed against her, Spaak accuse the Soviet Union of every possible violation of good faith in her international relations.

Waving his arms at the unsmiling Russian delegates, Spaak said:

"Our policy is based on fear of your government and fear of your policy, not the fear of a coward—the fear of one who looks ahead to horror and tragedy.

More Audacious than Czars

"We fear you because your foreign policy is more audacious and ambitious than the policy of the Czars themselves.

"We fear you because in every country represented here you are maintaining fifth columns besides which Hitlerite organizations were nothing but Boy Scouts."

A second bitter fight in the U. N. between East and West was assured when the Assembly without opposition put on its program Russia's demand for 33 1/3 per cent disarmament by the Big Five powers within one year and for immediate outlawing of the atomic bomb. Britain announced she reserved the right to put forth disarmament proposals of her own.

Mexico called for a big peace conference of all World War II belligerents, big and small, to conclude peace treaties "in the shortest possible time."

French Foreign Minister Schuman and Prime Minister Mackenzie King joined in Assembly debate in warning that the U. N. has failed up to now as an international political organization.

Schuman Assails Russia

Schuman, first of the Western Foreign Ministers to bring the Berlin crisis directly into debate, accused Russia of an "act of force" in her blockade and called on the Security Council to put an end to it.

Schuman said Russia had not even shown a minimum of good will.

"As we do not intend either to allow ourselves to be deprived of our rights or to abandon populations entrusted to our care we now, after two months during which we have exhausted every possibility of direct agreement, appeal to the U. N. to settle the dispute and put an end to the act of force represented by the blockade imposed and maintained by Soviet authorities," Schuman said.

Belgium's Spaak, the No. 1 orator of the U. N., roused delegates to a fervent display of emotion.

Most of the time he leaned over the speaker's rostrum and looked straight at the Russians. Only

New Military Aid Plan Prepared For West Europe

The State Department hopes to have a new program of military aid to western Europe ready to present to the Eighty-first Congress shortly after it convenes in January, it was learned last night.

The program would constitute a "cold war" lend-lease plan, aimed at bolstering the hand of the "Western Union" in the event of an east-west showdown over the Berlin situation.

The five European countries comprising the so-called Western Union—Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—have been holding secret meetings on mutual defense plans since they signed the Brussels mutual defense pact.

Just 'Get Adjusted'

Doctor Paints Glowing Picture Of Well-Being in Later Life

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Life in the so-called declining years beyond 50 can be cosy, Washington physicians, young and old, were told here yesterday.

The speaker was a vigorous, North Carolina physician, 63 years old and apparently happy about this aging process so many folks dread.

Dr. Wingate M. Johnson, chief of the private diagnostic clinic of Bowman-Gray School of Medicine, Wake Forest College, presented his views to delegates attending the current nineteenth annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society, at Hotel Statler.

Life's aging process, said Dr. Johnson, begins at birth and continues to the grave. Accordingly, man's only problem is to adjust himself.

On aging's duller side, he admitted that after the first 50 years the human machine begins to deteriorate.

"The muscles become flabbier, the bones more brittle, the joints stiffer; eyesight and hearing begin to fail; the human motor—the heart—begins to show the effect of mileage it has piled up, and, in men, the prostate may begin to act up," he admitted.

But on the brighter side, he offered:

"Vigorous exercise is seldom required, with less demand on muscles and less danger of breaking bones; onset of arthritis after 50 is far less crippling than the infectious or rheumatoid type which begins in younger life; older men show better resistance to infectious diseases; migraine usually disap-

Truck Kills Three In Va. Family on Way to Baptizing

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 28 (AP).—A mother and two of her children were killed tonight at Troutville when they were struck by a truck as they walked along the highway in the rain to church.

The victims were Mrs. Edna Ann Basham, 45, wife of a Roanoke filling station operator; her 14-year-old son, Donald Eugene Basham, and 12-year-old daughter, Margaret Deloris Basham, State police said.

Another son, Robert Price Basham, 10, was injured.

The father, W. E. Basham said his wife and children had just left the house and were walking to church for a baptizing.

CAB Weighing National Lines' Shift to Other Air Carriers

In an unprecedented action, the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday ordered an inquiry that could result in putting National Airlines, Inc., out of business.

The inquiry, the board said, is to determine "whether it is in the public interest" to shift National's route and equipment to other carriers.

The action conceivably could be the forerunner of others to reduce the number of trunk-line carriers. Most of them have been operating in the red.

In issuing yesterday's order, the board acted entirely upon its own initiative, officials said. National Airlines presumably had not been notified in advance.

The board's formal order said the investigation is to determine "whether the encouragement and development of an air transportation system properly adapted to the present and future needs of the United States, and the fostering of sound economic conditions in such air transportation system would not be furthered" by the transfer of National's routes and equipment.

The board said it will conduct a hearing about December 1 to decide whether to transfer National's routes as follows:

National's New York-Miami route to Pan American Airways.

New Orleans-Jacksonville and New Orleans-Miami routes to Delta Air Lines.

Miami-Havana route to Eastern Air Lines or Delta Air Lines.

Some Say Electrical Union's Jim Matles Is Plugged Into the Communist Party Line

Tall, dark and handsome Jim Matles, who sent out a volley of sparks from a House Labor Subcommittee hearing yesterday, is the dynamo who converts the power of 500,000 workers into the high-tension voltage of the United Electrical Workers (CIO).

As director of organization, the 39-year-old Romanian emigrant is nominally the No. 3 man of the Nation's No. 3 union (the Steelworkers and Auto Workers Unions are bigger), but many labor observers believe that Matles supplies the bulk of the current in the UE.

It's generally assumed that Maltes and the UE leadership are plugged into the Communist party line. Maltes yesterday refused to say whether or not he was a Communist. Early last year he denied he was either a Red or Red-sympathizer before the Senate Labor Committee.

Nonetheless, Matles' critics assert that his UE policy gyrations have turned on and off as if controlled by the Kremlin master switch.

After serving an apprenticeship as a machinist, James J. Matles left Romania at the age of 18 for the States. Within a couple of years he'd joined the labor movement, and rose to leadership of the AFL machinists.

In 1936, Jim led a group of locals out of the International Association of Machinsts into the newly-formed United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America (CIO). Five years later, in combination with Secretary-Treasurer Julius Emspak, Matles engineered the coup which ousted Jim Carey, CIO secretary and Commie-hater, as UE president. Since then, they've run the union without much opposition.

Party line or not, Jim Matles is an able fellow, and so far as the UE is concerned, regarded as an effective organizer an dastute negotiator despite a noticeable accent. In the recent annual convention, the UE reelected Matles to his $7200-a-year post by a 6-to-1 vote.

Management representatives who've had to deal with Matles agree that he has a trip-hammer mind, a command of the technical details, and a no-funny-business approach. He begins negotiations by saying what his union wants. Then he says: "I concede the possibility that a strike may be broken. Now lets get down to business. They like this frank approach—which has produced some remarkably quick settlements.

Some labor leaders, particularly those most outspoken against communism, eye Matles with hostility. They think he's a party-liner first, and a trade-unionist afterward.

Phil Murray, CIO chief, clashed with Matles at the 1947 convention. Reuther and the United Auto Workers feel that Matles betrayed them during the 1946 strike against General Motors. While the UAW was grimly holding out for 19½ cents, UE without notice accepted a settlement with General Motors of 18½ cents an hour.

Matles served in the Army for two years as an enlisted man. He's proud of that, says it kept him in the ranks with the workingman. He has a wife and child, keeps his family in the background, but is very much the solicitous father, who phones during negotiations that he'll be home late to dinner.

A labor observer summed up Jim Matles' ability this way:

"He can be rational, or he can be rabble-rousing, depending on the occasion. Either way, like the machinist he is, Jim Matles operates with precision."

Clay to Advise On Koch Case

By The Associated Press

Fresh charges of complicity in war crime horrors may be raised against Ilse Koch to prevent her release from prison, Army Secretary Royall said yesterday.

Mrs. Koch, widow of the commandant at the Nazis' Buchenwald prison camp, was originally sentenced to life for her part in offenses committed during World War II.

The sentence was reduced to four years in prison, however, and barring further action she may be released next year. Among other things, she was accused of making lampshades from the tattooed skin of human victims.

The reduction of the sentence was ordered by United States Army authorities in Germany, who said not all the charges against her were proved. The reduction drew protests from members of Congress and others.

Royall told newsmen he has asked Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American Military Governor in Germany, to advise him whether Mrs. Koch can be brought up for trial on additional charges beyond those on which she was convicted. This would have to be done without exposing her to double jeopardy—that is, further punishment for the same offense.

Royall made his disclosure as he left a 45-minute session with a Senate Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.). The committee has been looking into the reduction of Mrs. Koch's sentence.

Representative Klein (D., N. Y.) telegraphed Royall yesterday that Mrs. Koch was tried on only a few of the accusations against her. He suggested she could be indicted now on the others.

Protests were also received from Senators Baldwin (R., Conn.), Saltonstall (R., Mass.) and Tobey (R., N. H.).

ative, issued a joint statement later declaring that the "proven aims" of the House Labor Committee are "to weaken and destroy labor organizations which are most effectively fighting in the people's behalf against the drive of big business to wring greater profits from the toil of America's working men and women."

Their statement said the committeemen were trying to serve as "hatchetmen for industry."

The afternoon session was enlivened when Capitol policemen were ordered to remove David Scribner, UE general counsel, from the hearing room. Chairman Kersten had officers take Scribner out when he persisted in advising Amspak while the latter was on the witness stand.

Emspak refused to say whether he is or ever was a Communist, but he told the committee that "Comrade Juniper" never was his name.

The National Lawyers Guild later protested to Kersten against Scribner's ejection, calling it a "shocking mockery of orderly process and decent regard for citizens' rights."

Author Criticized

Arlington Woman Seeks Smith Seat As Progressive

Mrs. Sarah H. D'Avila, of Arlington, chairman of the Progressive Party in northern Virginia, yesterday announced her candidacy for Congress from the Eighth District on the Progressive ticket.

In her announcement, Mrs. d'Avila attacked the "one-party rule of the Byrd-Smith machine" and said she will give Eighth District voters an opportunity to be served by "a representative who is sincerely devoted to the welfare of the people."

She charged that Representative Howard W. Smith, incumbent, has "time and time a ain voted against the interests of his constituents." The Republican candidate Tyrrell Krum "offers nothing better," Mrs. d'Avila said.

baker resigned several months ago, and later in a letter to Ferguson charged Ewing's office with cutting out some anti-Communist references from a speech Studebaker had prepared to deliver.

Criticizes Studebaker

Studebaker also objected to Ewing's aides reviewing all speeches by education office officials, and added that anti-Communist references from educational books had been deleted by Ewing's office.

Ewing bitterly criticized Studebaker. He declared that Studebaker had never complained to him personally until his resignation. He also declared that the procedures against which Studebaker complained were set up before Ewing took over as administrator.

He charged Studebaker's letter to "personal pique."

John Thurston, assistant administrator of the Federal Security Agency, yesterday said a speech planned by Earl Hutchinson of the Office of Education had been changed because it gave the impression school children should become "spies."

He said he did not censor it but suggested a deletion because it gave him the impression Hutchinson was advocating that "school children should become spies to ferret out Communists." He said that exposing Communist teachers was a job for the FBI and the State Department.

Hutchinson later denied he ever made any suggestion for "junior G-men" in the Nation's schools.

Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), who severely castigated Studebaker Monday, declared Studebaker's letter to the committee "misleading."

"He comes in here without one scintilla of evidence to back up his charges," O'Conor declared.

Unconcerned About 'Politics'

Ewing also told the committee that politics has no place in FSA. "I don't even know the politics of a single soul in the Department of Education, and I don't care."

At the time Studebaker resigned, Ewing said, Ewing arranged for him to meet President Truman. "I never heard that he made any complaints against me at that time," he added.

Ewing declared that a number of changes are being planned in the Office of Education. He declared himself dissatisfied with the way it is being run.

Studebaker told the committee Monday that Ewing's policy of centralizing authority had hampered Studebaker's anti-Communist campaign through the public schools.

Head of AFL Union Indicted for Perjury

New York, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—A Federal grand jury brought an indictment of perjury today against Michael Obermeier, head of one of New York's biggest AFL unions, charging he lied about affiliation with the Communist Party.

Obermeier, head of Local 6, Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union, faces a maximum sentence of five years' imprisonment and a fine of $5000 on each of the three counts if convicted.

One of the first persons the Government sought to deport as an alien belonging to an organization advocating the overthrow of the Government by force, Obermeier, according to Assistant United States Attorney George Percy, denied any present or past affiliation with the Communist Party when he applied for citizenship in May and June of 1945 and again in June, 1946.

But, at a deportation hearing last November 1, Obermeier calmly admitted he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1930 until 1939. That testimony formed the basis for the perjury charges.

Lawyers Ask Probe Of Rep. Thomas

By The Associated Press

A request for an investigation of the way Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) has conducted his office has been "taken under advisement" by the Department of Justice.

Thomas is chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
DR. CLARENCE HISKEY
Accused by probers

Thomas said when newsmen advised him of the development. He had nothing else to say.

Seventeen New Jersey lawyers petitioned the department for such an investigation on September 23, Assistant Attorney General Alex M. Campbell disclosed yesterday. He said the matter has been taken "under advisement."

Pearson Columns Inclosed

Clipped to the lawyers' petition was a sheaf of newspaper columns by Drew Pearson dealing with the handling of the payroll in Thomas' office. The attorneys said they were "deeply concerned" over Pearson's charges and asked the Justice Department to determine if any Federal laws had been violated in connection with Thomas' personnel.

Only Monday Thomas' committee issued a preliminary report on its investigation of atomic espionage. The report said the Justice Department's failure to prosecute alleged atomic spies was 'indefensible."

Earlier yesterday, Thomas had disclosed that the espionage investigation will move to Milwaukee, with hearings Friday and Saturday in charge of Representative Vail (R., Ill.).

Three committee investigators went there yesterday to follow up on one phase of the inquiry. The witnesses were not announced in advance.

The hearings, Thomas told reporters, will involve one of the cases mentioned in the committee's preliminary report on atomic espionage made public Monday.

Four Accused in Report

That report recommended the prosecution of Steve Nelson on charges of spying, and of Dr. John H. Chapin, Dr. Clarence F. Hiskey and Marcia Sand Hiskey on charges of conspiring to hand over atomic secrets to Soviet agents.

Nelson was described as a Communist Party organizer in Pennsylvania. Chapin and Hiskey were atomic bomb project scientists during the war. Marcia Sand Hiskey is Hiskey's former wife.

Chapin denied in New York that he had engaged in conspiracy or had "done anything for which I need fear legal reprisal." Marcia Sand Hiskey said "I refute" the charges. Hiskey could not be reached.

His present wife, Mrs. Miriam Hiskey, said "he asked me to say he's not available."

However, his former wife, Marcia Sand, characterized the charges against him as "ridiculous to begin with."

Regarding the charges against herself, she said:

"Of course I refute them. I have nothing to say. We'll see what Truman will say."

She declined to amplify the remark.

At Lacrosse, Wis., Hiskey's father, Ernest, 64, said "our family has always been devout Catholics. We've always disliked Communists and everything about them. Clarence always felt the same way."

Frame-up, Says Nelson

Nelson, at Pittsburgh, declared the committee "is cooking up a political frame-up against me because I oppose their fascist views."

Thomas claimed new evidence yesterday that one of the witnesses heard in secret had lied under oath. He said the evidence is a letter which contradicts testimony the man gave to the committee. The witness, he said, was one of five persons who were identified by the committee as belonging to a "ring" in New York. This ring, the committee said, was closely associated with a Soviet agent called Arthur Alexandrovich Adams.

The committee's report called Adams "virtually a 'charter member' Communist of the Soviet Union." The committee also was trying to turn up a mysterious "Scientist X" whom the report linked with Nelson.

Two men identified as from the Soviet Embassy called at the committee office yesterday to pick up copies of the preliminary report on the alleged spying into atomic secrets. The men refused to tell reporters their names.

District's First Postwar Wac...

The Washington Post

IN THE ARMY AGAIN—S/Sergt. Elizabeth (Betty) Carpenter, who reenlisted yesterday in the Women's Army Corps as the first Wac in the Second Army Area to sign up under the new Joint Armed Services laws, is sworn in by Lieut. Col. Raymond Kenny, commanding officer of the Washington Recruiting Office. Miss Carpenter, a veteran of service in Germany, attended elementary school in Frederick, Md., and was graduated from Roosevelt High School here in 1941. She lives at 1311 Randolph st. nw.

Selective service "greetings," in the form of orders to report for preinduction physical and mental examinations, were mailed yesterday to 10 District men classified 1-A for the peacetime draft.

The orders, which set off the preinduction examination program, direct the men to report to the Army and Air Force recruiting station, 403 10th st. nw., at 8:30 a. m. Monday. Mental tests will be given there, with physicals to follow at Fort McNair.

Through October, 320 Washington men, mostly in the 25 and 24-year-old age groups, will be examined under present plans. From them, District Selective Service officials hope, will come the men to fill Washington's 55-man November draft call.

Frank D. Norton, deputy draft director, said that only 70 tardy registrants signed up yesterday at draft headquarters, 19th and D sts. nw., as against 150 Monday.

Sworn into the Army yesterday as the first WAC enlistment from this area since its ranks were opened September 15 was Miss Elizabeth Carpenter, 23, of 1311 Randolph st. nw. Miss Carpenter, who was a WAC staff sergeant during the war and reenlisted in that rank, will be sent to Camp Lee, Va., next week.

The Navy will enlist six Greater Washington women in the WAVES Thursday, according to Lieut. Gertrude M. Mountain, WAVE recruiting officer.

Board Doubts If Remington Was Loyal

By The Associated Press

Counsel for William W. Remington said yesterday a regional loyalty board has ruled there are "reasonable grounds to believe" the suspended Commerce Department official was "disloyal." He announced Remington will appeal to President Truman's Loyalty Review Board.

Joseph L. Rauh, the attorney, released this statement from Remington:

"I have appealed the case to the Loyalty Review Board with the request that I be given an opportunity to confront and cross-examine Miss Bentley."

Miss Elizabeth Bentley is the Vassar graduate who accused Remington of giving her "secret" information when she was a Communist spy ring courier during the war. Remington then was an official of the War Production Board.

Threatened Libel Suit

More recently, Remington was a $10,000-a-year Commerce Department official. As such, he presided over a board which passed on what exports could be made to Russia.

Remington, a week ago, told the press he would file a libel action against Miss Bentley and the National Broadcasting Co. for repeating on a television broadcast the charges she made originally before congressional committees—provided they do not publish retractions by noon Thursday.

Remington, it was learned, did not receive notice of the regional board's finding against him until some hours after he threatened the libel action. There had been no previous word that the board was near decision.

Earlier Finding Contradicted

Attorney Rauh said the regional board's finding does not mean any change in Remington's plans to sue Miss Bentley and NBC unless they apologize.

The regional board's finding was at odds with an earlier finding of the Commerce Department loyalty board, which had said there was no evidence before it which gave reasonable grounds to believe Remington disloyal.

After Miss Bentley's charges were made on Capitol Hill, Remington went before the congressional committees and swore he had never done anything disloyal.

Remington was suspended from his Commerce Department post in June by Secretary of Commerce Sawyer. Sawyer acted after learning the Civil Service board was checking on Remington's loyalty.

Rules for Gun Toters Made in Philippines

Manila, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Philippines Safety Council took note of the prevalence of postwar gun toters today by advising:

Pistols properly are carried in a holster rather than tucked inside the belt or in a pocket.

They are safer in holsters.

It is much easier to draw a pistol from a holster.

Pearl-handled revolvers have become fashionable arms at night spots, and signs such as "check your guns here" are as common as they were in the days of the American Wild West.

Five Powers Agree On Defense Plans

Paris, Sept. 28 (NYHT)—The Defense Ministers of the five Western Union nations announced tonight agreement on a common defense policy and formed a permanent organization to carry it out.

A communique, summarizing the results of the two-day conference of France, Britain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, showed the five nations are getting down to details on plans for equipping their armed forces and coordinating their tactics and strategy in event of war.

The permanent organization being set up under the five Defense Ministers will carry out the agreed common defense policy and "deal with problems of production and procurement of equipment."

This was believed designed to enable the five countries to present their detailed defense plans to the United States and appeal for American material to implement them.

Officials closely connected with the conference admitted tonight that the decisions adopted today mean, in effect, that the next move is up to the United States. Both the United States and Canada had observers at the secret conference.

The communique said the permanent organizatiton under the Defense Ministers would "include the nucleus of a land, air and naval command with a permanent military chairman."

There was no indication as to who the chairman might be, but speculation centered around Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the imperial general staff, and General Alphonse Juin, former chief of staff to Gen. Charles de Gaulle in North Africa and now governor of French North Africa.

Participating in the conference were A. V. Alexander, of Britain, Paul Ramadier of France, Lieut. Col. Raoul de Fraiteur of Belgium, W. E. H. Schoking of Netherlands, and Lambert Schaus of Luxembourg. Maj. Gen. A. F. Riber represented the United States.

Spaak Assails Soviet in U. N.

second-string Russian delegates were on hand as chief Soviet Delegate Andrei Y. Vishinsky and other leaders were elsewhere.

Spaak listed a formidable number of fears, all fears inspired by Russian aggressiveness, he said.

Spaak reminded Russia that she alone, among the winners of World War II, had grabbed territory from others.

He also derided Russia's complaint that American newspapers published articles pointing out the distance between American Air bases and Moscow.

"Does Mr. Vishinsky wish to give me assurances that the general staff of he Soviet Union has never figured the air distance between Moscow and London?" he asked.

Spaak ended with an appeal to the Russians to play ball.

"We must seek a spectacular coup, a compromise," Spaak said. "It is not too late, but I believe it is time that we act. Promise us your cooperation. Promise us to help us start off from a new basis."

Applauded Five Minutes

Spaak was applauded for five minutes when he finished, and Secretary of State Marshall was one of those who hastened to shake hands with him.

White Russian Delegate Kuzma V. Kisilev closed the day's oratory, addressing a half-empty Assembly hall.

He echoed Russian charges of an atomic war plot by Western countries. He agreed with Spaak on one thing, that the great present evil in the world is fear. But he said that it was a "campaign of lies, slanders and calumny" against Russia which was designed to inspire "fear in the souls of the masses."

Soviet Delegate Questioned

Russian Delegate Jacob Malik, asked if Russia would walk out of the U. N., said:

"This is the first I have heard of it."

Later he was asked if he could clarify rumors about Russia's tactics.

"It seems to be that correspondents just look for rumors," he said.

He was told that they were just looking for clarifications.

"That's fine," he said. "But I am not in the business of putting out rumors."

Conant Warns Class About 'Divided World'

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 28 (AP).—Harvard freshmen were told today they were "fated to live in a divided world for many years to come."

President James B. Conant advised his incoming class of 1325 to fortify their idealism and courage so that upon graduation they would be "rational human beings without becoming dehumanized intellectual machines."

"The ideological conflict between the believers in the Marx-Engels-Lenin doctrine and the rest of the civilized world seems to promise at best a long period of armed truce," he said.

Reds Expected Appeasement

By The Associated Press

Informed sources said yesterday that Russia entered the Berlin negotiations convinced the Western Allies would back down and the talks would end in "the greatest American diplomatic humiliation in history.

Intelligence reports reaching here said the Soviet leaders were so confident that in early August they passed the word quietly to editors in the Communist satellite states to "stand by" for news of a sweeping Russian propaganda victory.

The editors reportedly were ordered to exploit the story as an American defeat.

Highly placed informants who accept these intelligence reports as true advanced this theory as to why the "Soviet victory" was expected and why it never came:

Soviet overconfidence—Premier Josef Stalin was convinced he held all the aces when the conferences started and that the Western powers would be squeezed out of Berlin if Russia refused to lift her blockade.

Soviet strategy—Russia planned to lift the blockade only if the Western powers postponed their arrangements for establishing a Western German government. Such a trade would have been a great diplomatic blow to the Western Allies, who had said publicly they would not under any circumstances call off the German constituent assembly.

Soviet miscalculations — The Kremlin did not reckon on the ability of the allied airlift to supply Berlin, the unity of the United States, Britain and France, or the willingness of the people of Berlin to undergo hardship.

Late in August, it became apparent to the Kremlin that the Western powers were not going to yield. The Soviets gave up their hope for an American "humiliation" but decided to drag on the negotiations and force the Western powers to break them off.

Russia thus tried to salvage a negative propaganda victory by blaming the Western powers for failure to reach an agreement, the United Press informants said. That is the line now being taken by Communist newspapers in Europe.

Highly placed officials in this country predicted that Russia would stop short of war.

Walter Bedell Smith, United States Ambassador to Moscow, expressed that opinion Monday night to President Truman.

Senator J. William Fulbright, (D., Ark.) just returned from Europe, said there would be no war over Berlin if the United States, Britain and France stand up to Russia.

A similar opinion was voiced by European Recovery Administrator Paul G. Hoffman.

"Mr. Stalin won't march," Hoffman predicted, if the free nations of Western Europe can be kept united."

Reds Tell Berliners Blockade Will Stick

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Sept. 28 (NYHT.).—German Communists told Berliners today that the United Nations would not succeed in lifting the Soviet blockade and said the Berlin problem "must be referred to" the Council of Foreign Ministers.

Neues Deutschland, official Communist paper, declared: "The agreements reached in Moscow are still effective. War threats are only likely to worsen the steadily deteriorating position of west Berlin."

Clay Criticized

The Soviet-licensed press also let loose a propaganda blast blaming the western allies for the breakdown of the Moscow talks on Germany as a whole. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor in Germany, was said to have insisted on adjourning the technical talks without giving experts sufficient time to work out details.

This was denied by the western allies, who today gave out further details of the negotiations at Moscow and Berlin.

These details, as made public here, raise the issue of whether in the period between August 23 and August 27 Prime Minister Stalin went back on his word or whether he was overruled by the branch of the Politburo led by Foreign Minister Viacheslav M. Molotov.

On August 23 the three western powers agreed to accept the Soviet mark as the sole currency in Berlin and also agreed orally with Stalin that its issuance would be under four-power control. Molotov was to incorporate this idea into the directive to the Soviet military governor. This was completed August 27, but Molotov is said to have so worded the directive as to leave it open for misinterpretation.

When the question came up in Berlin, Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, the Soviet commander, was reminded of Stalin's oral agreement, which lay on the table. "I have only one document in front of me," he replied smiling.

This bland rejection of what the western powers thought had been their agreement with Stalin led soon to the breakdown of the Berlin talks.

Twenty-eight truckloads of goods bound for the Soviet sector were held up today as the American military government acted to track down smugglers and black marketeers.

Reds Assail Finnish Clubs

Moscow, Sept. 28 (AP).—A Tass dispatch from Helsinki said today Russia has called the attention of the Finnish foreign minister to violations of the peace treaty by shooting and hunting societies in the area of Laikhiya, Finland.

The dispatch said Soviet Minister Savonenkov told the Finnish minister yesterday. The hunting societies had engaged in "military activity," using a specially equipped rifle range which formerly belonged to a fascist organization dissolved by Finnish authorities.

(Helsinki's Communist press Saturday said the Soviet Union had demanded dissolution of the rifle clubs but a Finnish foreign office spokesman denied any formal protest had been made.)

Reds Ruining U. N. Ideal, Says King

Paris, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Canada's Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, making his last appearance at an international conference before retiring from office, today accused the Soviet Union of ruining the United Nations ideal "by deliberate hindrance of the political and economic reorganization of the postwar world."

King told the U. N. Assembly it was still in their power to turn failure into success, or at least in the direction of success.

The Canadian warned the U. N. should not try to do too much. "I, for one, believe the United Nations has attempted far too much in far too short a time," he said. "We have overlooked the fact that any world institution, especially one which aims at effective cooperation among all nations, is certain to be of slow growth."

One reason why this cooperation had not materialized was that "the sense of world community of interest" had not developed, he said.

Ex-First Lady Assails Red 'Democracy'

Paris, Sept. 28 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt charged Russia tonight with ruthless suppression of human rights at home and interference in other countries' affairs.

She urged the United Nations not to compromise with the Soviet bloc on the issue of human freedom, which she termed the "basic problem confronting the world today."

Her address at the Sorbonne was an outspoken attack on Soviet-style "democracy." She is a U. S. delegate to the United Nations.

"We are fighting this battle again today as it was fought at the time of the French revolution and the American Revolution," she said. "The issue of human liberty is as decisive now as it was then."

Mrs. Roosevelt said Russia's modern history bred suspicion in the Russian people, and "the great difficulty is today that their government encourages this suspicion and seems to believe that force alone will bring them respect.

'We in the democracies . . . do not think that Russia should treat us differently from the way they wish to be treated. It is interference in other countries that especially stirs up antagonism against the Soviet government."

Romanian Envoy's Poison Death Hoax

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—The reported death by poisoning of Romanian Ambassador Grigo Moisil was a hoax, a Romanian Embassy spokesman said today.

Ionel Crishan, embassy counsellor, said the story was intended as "vengeance" against the Turkish press for printing "vicious rumors and lies" about Romanian diplomats. He said he was sorry the foreign press was taken in.

Crishan denied a Turkish foreign office report that Moisil intends to resign.

The hoax, Crishan said, was a result of Turkish press reports that many astern European diplomats, recalled by their governments, planned to resign rather than go home.

[At Istanbul, the Associated Press said Moisil chuckled today over the reports that he "died a mysterious death" last night.

["Look at me. Do I appear dead?" Moisil asked. That was all a joke by some embassy person." Asked if he were resigning as reported, Moisil replied: "I'm still in the embassy, aren't I?"]

'Vacation' Over

Gottwald Back From Soviet Visit

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Klement Gottwald, Communist President of Czechoslovakia, returned today from a Russian "vacation" during which he conferred with unnamed "leading representatives of the Soviet Union," the government announced.

He brought with him a promise that Russia would ship 300,000 tons of wheat, 25,000 tons of meat and 25,000 tons of animal fat to this country during 1949. He also had an assurance Soviet cotton shipments would be increased.

(There have been reports Gottwald conferred with Soviet Premier Josef Stalin and leaders of other Soviet satellite states in the Crimea.

(Leading Communists of Romania, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria and Russia have been "absent." Only Poland and "excommunicated" Yugoslovia had been able to account for their leading statesmen during recent weeks.)

Gottwald was greeted at the airport by top leaders who presented him with bouquets. The welcoming committee had come to the airport four times since Gottwald's expected arrival last Saturday, bringing fresh bouquets each time.

French Aides Seek to Quit

Paris, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Premier Henri Queuille's right-of-center government faced its first internal test today as a subordinate official sought to resign and a Minister was reported ready to quit.

Yvon Coude de Foresto, Popular Republican undersecretary of state for food, offered his resignation yesterday because he said he lacked authority to deal with speculators. Agriculture Minister Pierre Pflimlin was also expected to offer to resign for unspecified reasons.

Queuille refused to accept De Foresto's resignation. A special cabinet meeting Wednesday will discuss the resignation.

Revolt Flares In Ethiopia

Asmara, Eritrea, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Reports from Ethiopia today said troops led by Emperor Haile Selassie's son-in-law have been rushed into Semien Province to deal with a revolt against the government.

Travelers returning from Ethiopia also reported a battle was fought during the past few days between Adowa and Gondar, in which rebels wounded the province's chief administrator. The revolt was said to have broken out over high taxation.

Meanwhile, a new pro-Italian political party in Eritrea cabled the United Nations requesting independence or Italian trusteeship. It rejected the idea of Ethiopian trusteeship for Eritrea and called for a plebiscite under a neutral authority.

Anti-U. S. Greek Minister May Quit

Athens, Greece, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Interior Minister Mavr Michalis today was reported considering resigning over United States policy in Greece.

Michalis has refused to attend cabinet meetings in protest against the government's program to decentralize its authority, as suggested by American officials.

Meanwhile, 28 persons were sentenced to death in courts martial at Drama and Larissa for aiding the guerillas and two Greek army majors were being tried in Athens on charges of cowardice in the face of the enemy. Several army officers recently were reported refusing orders to leave towns to fight guerilla units.

Guerillas raided the town of Dhakopton, on the Gulf of Corinth, but were turned back by fire from a navy patrol boat. In Tripolis, an aqueduct was blown up for the third time this year.

Soldier Families Barred

Cripps Cites Help By Britain Abroad

Sir Stafford Cripps, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, promised yesterday that his country would continue and increase its cooperation with the rest of western Europe.

He told of his repeated statements in Parliament "that real cooperation in economic matters means dislocation in many ways, and that our people are prepared to face that dislocation if it will lead to true and full European cooperation.

"Parliament has supported me in that," he said, "because, like the British Government, the British Parliament is desperately anxious to translate the words of the agreement for European cooperation into action. It is action and not words that will save European democracy."

The Chancellor spoke at the National Press Club in his first public appearance since coming here for the annual meetings of the International Bank and Monetary Fund.

As if to refute the stories that Britain was "dragging her feet" in European cooperation, he cited one example after another of what he called "action" by Britain to help her neighbors in Europe.

He spoke of two billion dollars' worth of British grants and loans since the end of the war; of sending 13 million tons of oil, worth 160 million, to western Europe in this year alone; of sending 270,000 tons of machinery to western Europe this year, or four times as much as in 1938; of contributing 620 million dollars to UNRRA and of taking more refugees and displaced persons than all other countries put together.

He said Britain would fulfill its promise of shipping six million tons of coal to western Europe this year—a promise made "in the very year of our own most acute fuel crisis and when our own people were getting the very minimum of coal for domestic purposes."

And he declared that "we have literally strained ourselves to the utmost" to make a free gift of 282 million dollars' worth of sterling to western European countries which art short of British currency, and to let them draw another 200 million dollars' worth of their existing sterling balances. This, he explained, was Britain's contribution to the new intra-European payments scheme whereby the Marshall Plan countries can get the currency needed to import urgently needed European supplies.

It represented almost 500 million dollars of exports not balanced by imports, and to this extent depressed the British standard of living or deprived British industries of needed equipment—but, he told his packed and attentive audience, "we are prepared to make this contribution to the payments problem, because we recognize the necessity to us of European cooperation."

Dealing with Britain's own efforts toward recovery, the Chancellor said his country had reduced its over-all trade deficit by fifty-five percent in the past year, chiefly in four ways: (1) by producing 20 percent more goods than before the war; (2) by selling more goods to the western hemisphere and buying less; (3) by building more shipping and encouraging tourist trade, and (4) by heavy taxation and by encouraging consumer restraint, to keep prices down.

"Any business executive would, I believe, regard such a reduction of an adverse balance in his own business as a pretty fine achievement," the Chancellor said.

"And these results were not achieved by a people who had plentiful supplies of all they needed. We have been short of foodstuffs, short of raw materials, and short of capital goods because we have had to send abroad every ounce of exports that we could.

"Our people could make and admire our high class production, but they couldn't buy it; it was marked 'For Export Only.' It is indeed because of their restraint on the one hand, and their efforts in production on the other that these improvements have come about. They are the reward for the self-disciplined austerity of a free and stable democracy."

But without the "great conception of E.R.P., he said, Britain would have had to cut its imports so drastically "that I doubt whether we could really have planned for any recovery at all."

Toward the end of his speech, Cripps dealt with the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, which he described as "the embodiment of an idea, an idea which can and must be made to save oour free democratic civilization." He said that in dividing up American aid and in devising a European payments scheme the O.E.E.C. had passed "a milestone in international cooperation."

"I can think of no example in the history of international affairs—not the growth of the British Commonwealth nor the integration of the 13 American colonies," he said, "in which a movement of cooperation has proceeded with anything like the same speed."

And he described the present preparation of four-year recovery plans for all the Marshall Plan countries as "something absolutely new in the history of the world," in which individual countries, potential rivals in trade, will share their future hopes and plans.

He gave assurance that his country firmly intended to be standing on its own feet by 1952 "at whatever standard of living for our people we can attain." Later, answering questions, he said Britain had no intention of devaluing the pound and was sending "negligible" amounts of goods to Russia. He described ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman's attitude toward the Labor government as "absolutely perfect."

Report to U. N.

Negligence Laid to Jews In Slayings

Lake Success, Sept. 28 (AP).—Dr. Ralph Bunche, acting United Nations mediator in Palestine, accused Jewish authorities of negligence today in connection with the assassination of Count Folke Bernadotte.

Bunche drew up a report for the Security Council on the killing in Jerusalem September 17. The report was sent to Paris and to Lake Success from Rhodes.

Bunche said he could not help but conclude the Jewish authorities in Jerusalem had not taken adequate security precautions with regard to Bernadotte's safety.

His report declared Jewish terrorist groups enjoyed freedom of movement and little control up to the September 20 ordinance of Israeli authorities outlawing such groups.

Bunche then appealed to the Security Council to take urgent measures to see that "criminal bands" are controlled in Palestine.

U. N. to Renew Africa Debate

Paris, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—The U. N. General Assembly agreed today to renew debate on alleged discrimination against colored people in South Africa, despite a protest that the discussion would violate states' rights.

South African Delegate E. H. Louw opposed renewed consideration of India's charges that her people are mistreated in South Africa, declaring that the matter was purely an internal affair of the Dominion.

Louw declared the Assembly was exceeding its powers under the U. N. Charter when it undertook to interfere in the domestic affairs of member nations.

Hyderabad Issue Kept on U. N. Agenda

Paris, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Argentina's Dr. Jose Arce suggested today that the United Nations Security Council invite India to withdraw its troops from the princely state of Hyderabad and submit the case for a peaceful settlement.

Reds' Envoy Goes Home

London, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Russian Ambassador Georgi N. Zarubin left by air today for Paris, en route to Moscow. He said he was "going home merely for a holiday."

Arce said he would vote against droppihg the case from the council agenda until the Nizam of Hyderabad was heard from personally.

"All the latest communications on the problem have come to the Council by way of India," Arce said.

He claimed the Indian Government has not denied using force, and therefore the Council could not overlook "this case of military action by one state against another."

The Council, after 3½ hours' debate, adjourned without reaching a decision.

Indian troops invaded Hyderabad earlier this month after the Nizam refused to join his state with the Indian commonwealth.

Argentina May Seek U. S. Accord

London, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Relations between the United States and Argentina have worsened but Argentina's present economic weakness may cause the Peron government to reach a settlement with Washington, The Economist, a business weekly, said today.

The paper said the government of Juan D. Peron has suddenly become afraid the United States is "using the Marshall Plan to check various forms of Argentine profiteering in world markets"

The article said Argentine officials had hoped for easy dollars through the Marshall Plan, but thus far ECA purchases from Argentina have totaled only $356,000 for Germany.

Reaching a settlement with Washington should not be difficult, the article said, "since Washington no longer aims to overthrow Peron and is concerned primarily with increasing the world supplies of foodstuffs at reasonable prices."

Reds Control Java Province

Batavia, Java, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Muso, Moscow-trained insurgent leader, today was reported in control of most of important Madioen Province in eastern Java, as well as Madioen City, which the Indonesian republic admitted losing to the Communists September 18.

Communiques during the past few days indicated the Communists hold far more territory than Republican officials first admitted.

Authoritative sources said it might take the Republican army two months to suppress the revolt. Army officials, in turning down Dutch help, intimated they expected victory within a few days.

So far, the army has succeeded in keeping the Communists inland, without sea or air ports, informants said. The Communists force number from 3000 to 15,000 men.

Outbreaks started 10 days ago, when Muso established a Communist government at Madioen, 85 miles northwest of the Republican capital of Jogjakarta. Within a week, two more communes were set up—at Sonogiri, 35 miles east of Jogjakarta, and Purwodadi, 65 miles northeast of the capital.

Mukden Lift Reported Cut

Shanghai, Sept. 28 (AP).—Commercial air lines pilots arriving here from Manchuria reported today that the vital Chinhsien airfield, key to the Mukden airlift, had been lost to Red forces.

The report was not confirmed otherwise, but was plausible since military sources in Nanking yesterday had announced that advance Red units were probing at Chinhsien's outer defenses.

Loss of the air link was a serious blow to the Nationalist effort to supply isolated Mukden and keep open the Manchurian corridor.

Chinhsien is but 125 miles south of Mukden.

Progovernment reports in Peiping persisted that the Nationalists had scored a major victory in the Chinhsien area, but there was nothing to indicate the dispatches were factual.

By The Associated Press

Documents left behind by Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary on an expedition in 1905—four years before he discovered the North Pole — have been found far up in the Arctic Circle.

Peary

The State Department made the bare announcement of the discovery yesterday. It gave no details of what the records disclosed.

The Navy was similarly reticent. Some Government officials said the Navy's caution was dictated by fears that Russia might be tipped off about navigable waters in the ice-choked region where Peary's notes were found.

This vast polar area has assumed more and more strategic importance in postwar years since tension between the United States and Russia has tightened.

Found in Rock Cache

The State Department's brief announcement, made jointly with the Canadian government, said three United States Navy and Coast Guard ships made the discovery on an Arctic expedition last summer. The documents were found in a rock cache on Ellesmere Island, in the extreme north of Canada, about 450 miles from the North Pole.

The announcement said: "As is usual on Northern expeditions, Peary's notes found in the cairn were replaced by appropriate documents." The Navy now has the originals.

The handwritten chronicle told of Peary's arrival in the region and listed the roster of his ship, the Roosevelt. Evidently he left it behind to show he had been there. Peary visited the area in 1905 and 1906, and reached the North Pole on another expedition in 1909.

Ships Back in Boston

The Navy-Coast Guard ships—two icebreakers and a cargo vessel—have now returned to Boston. Two of the ships were reported to have pushed beyond latitude 85 degrees north, or farther than any surface vessel has penetrated into the Arctic wastes.

On the voyage home, they were said to have taken a different route through straits and channels believed never to have been navigated before. The new route was not disclosed.

The task force was sent primarily to supply four weather stations in the Arctic and to scout for new stations to be set up next year. Canadian naval officers went along, since the stations were jointly established by the United States and Canada.

Helicopters carried aboard the vessels helped in discovering the Peary documents.

The State Department's announcement said the expedition also found records left by the British explorer, Sir George Nares, in 1875 and 1876, telling of deaths among his crew.

Safety Parley Planners End 3-Day Meeting

"Extremely fine cooperation" between the two key elements of the President's conference on industrial safety—labor and management—was reported yesterday as the conference prepared for its final session.

"We had no points of dispute on this subject whatsoever," declared Harold Zulauf, vice president of the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co., and chairman of the conference committee on labor-management cooperation for safety.

Vice chairman of the committee is John Sherman, a vice president of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite & Paper Mill Workers.

Sitting on the same side of the conference table on this subject also were such normally divergent view-holders as Carroll E. French, director of the National Association of Manufacturers' Industrial Relations division, and Herbert Payne, vice president of the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO.

The labor-management committee on industrial safety is one of 10 general committees participating in a three-day preliminary conference, drawing up plans for a permanent national industrial safety organization. General conference chairman is Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin.

Last year, industrial accidents cost industry and labor a financial loss of 3½ billion dollars, plus two million injured, 17,000 killed and 91,000 permanently disabled.

Starting at 9:30 a. m. today in the Interdepartmental Auditorium, the conference study committees will report their recommendations in such fields as education, research, regulations, engineering and special services to curb industrial accidents.

The preliminary conference will conclude today, with the full-dress organization conference scheduled to open here March 30.

National's union pilots have been on strike since February over a grievance matter. The company has continued to operate with non-union pilots.

Latest records of the board show that National had a net operating loss of more than two million dollars in the 12 months ended last March 31.

CAB's Action 'Amazing,' Says National's Head

Miami, Fla., Sept. 28 (AP).—G. T. Baker, president of National Airlines, tonight called the Civil Aeronautics Board action "unprecedented."

"The board's announcement follows exactly one week after the hearings before Congressman Hartley, chairman of the House Committee on Education and Labor, at which time it was indicated that Congress would continue investigating the Mediation Board's handling of the National Airlines' pilot' strike," Baker said in a statement.

"National has consistently been one of the country's low cost, profitable operators and its capital position today is superior to many other air lines."

More Police

Police Superintendent Barrett will find support in FBI statistics for his recommendation further to increase the personnel of the Washington Department. Although, as this newspaper has pointed out, the new system of crime reporting makes strict comparisons with other cities inaccurate, Washington is near the top of the list in the number of offenses of various categories with annoying regularity. At the same time, the number of police per 1000 population has been under the national average for large cities. For the fiscal year 1949, Congress approved the addition of 205 patrolmen, though funds were provided for only 155 because of an anticipated lag in recruiting. Major Barrett has requested the addition of 90 uniformed men during fiscal 1950, including the 50 remaining from the previous congressional authorization. He also has asked for the confirmation of 60 civilian employes, 28 of whom are now employed on a temporary basis.

In a sense the addition of more policemen is a negative way to combat crime. It would be encouraging, for example, if the elimination of crime-breeding conditions through a slum-clearance program were moving along as rapidly as the efforts to deal with the results of those conditions. Nevertheless, more policemen on the street undoubtedly will serve as a check on crime. Accordingly, Major Barrett's request for a larger budget for this purpose merits sympathetic consideration by the Commissioners despite the fact that it violates their economy edict.

One other item of Major Barrett's request warrants further scrutiny. He proposes the temporary promotion of nine detectives in charge of various squads to captain without resort to competitive examination. Although such procedure is permitted by the Civil Service Commission with respect to detectives, it is a dubious practice which, if abused, could amount to packing the police department with officers selected by whim rather than merit.

Cripps' Accounting

Sir Stafford Cripps has brought to Washington a refreshing, forthright quality that impels confidence. In his talk before the National Press Club Tuesday he proved himself an expert salesman as well as an expert logician. Absent was the coldness often attributed to him. If the British Chancellor of the Exchequer is a man of austerity, it is a genial austerity bolstered by a fundamental humanity and a welcome candor. Here is no defeatist, no apostle of privation for privation's sake. Sir Stafford told Britain's story impressively, and the most impressive thing about it was the feeling of hope that he transmitted to his audience.

Hope, as Sir Stafford would be the first to recognize, is not enough. It is not pleasant, for example, to contemplate such inconsistencies as tons of English seafood rotting for lack of dry ice while the diet continues meager. There have been too many reports of industrial inefficiency for there to be any complacency. Despite the increase in coal production to the point where exports are possible, output per man remains only a fraction of what is normal in this country. As a correspondent pointed out on the page opposite earlier this week, the vast potentialities of chemurgy—industrial use of agricultural products—have scarcely been scratched. One of the purposes of Sir Stafford's trip is to seek help in modernizing British production.

But remaining deficiencies should not overshadow what Britain has accomplished in refurbishing its economy. Sir Stafford did not minimize the job ahead, but he did view with understandable pride the reduction of the unfavorable trade balance by 55 per cent during the first half of this year. Exports are now running at a rate of 140 per cent of prewar, whereas imports from dollar areas have been drastically curtailed. Meanwhile, a vigorous shipping construction program and expanded tourist trade have contributed to improving the invisible balance. These strides have been made under rigid inflation controls which Sir Stafford termed "the self-disciplined austerity of a free and stable democracy."

Sir Stafford paid fulsome tribute to the European Recovery Program as the genesis and catalyst of recovery. At the same time, he noted the substantial aid which Britain herself has been giving her neighbors in recognition of a common problem. Since the end of the war Britain not only has sent needed goods to Europe but also has extended grants and loans in the amount of two billion dollars.

Of the Organization of European Economic Cooperation functioning in conjunction with ERP, Sir Stafford said: "The future of the world and nothing less is at stake in this first essay at international control of one another's economic affairs by 16 widely different governments." Despite the manifold difficulties which he recognizes in obtaining a workable supranational economy, the area of accomplishment is already considerable, through such devices as the inter-European payments agreement. Attention to what already has been done is a good antidote for the discouragement of those prone to look for miracles overnight. Far from dragging his feet, Sir Stafford Cripps has given evidence that he is fully aware of the task of moral and spiritual regeneration involved in building a cooperative Europe.

Girding The U. N.

Mr. Bevin has given the proper answer to those who would drape the United Nations in sackcloth and ashes before it even receives the American-British-French complaint against the Soviet Union. His speech to the General Assembly in Paris makes it evident that the statesmen of the Western powers have no thought of loading upon the U. N. a burden it cannot carry. On the contrary, it seems indicative of a strong determination among the statesmen assembled at Paris to mobilize the strength of the Western world to uphold the principles of the U. N. in whatever manner may appear most feasible.

Messrs. Marshall, Bevin and Schuman could have no illusions as to the ability of the Security Council to cope with the dilemma in Berlin. The United Nations was never designed to compel settlement of differences between the great powers. Its founders at San Francisco took it for granted that all of the big powers would voluntarily meet their obligations as U. N. members, and of course, the first of these obligations is to settle all disputes without resort to coercion or war. By referring the Berlin dispute to the Security Council the three Western powers are compelling Russia to choose between adherence to her pledge and open flouting of the Charter in the face of world opinion. Beyond that, the U. N. is likely to be useful largely as a guide in principle as to what must be done.

Russia will undoubtedly resist any entertainment of the three-nation appeal by the Security Council. The business of making peace after World War II was deliberately kept out of the hands of the U. N. Article 107 says that nothing in the Charter shall invalidate or preclude action in relation to enemy states taken or authorized as a result of that war by governments having responsibility for such action. The Kremlin will take full advantage of this provision. Actually, however, Article 107 seems to go no further than to prevent U. N. interference with the victorious powers in their dealings with their former enemies. Certainly it does not relieve U. N. members of their obligation to abide by the Charter in their relations with each, whether or not their dispute involves the control of a former enemy state. Nor does it minimize the necessary concern of the Security Council with any threat to the peace.

The danger to the U. N. is not that the dispute cannot be properly brought before it, but that the Soviet will block all nonprocedural action with its veto power. It is at this point that constructive buttressing needs to be undertaken. The Western world cannot afford to let the U. N. be strangled by the veto. "If we find in the end," as Mr. Bevin says, "that we cannot proceed on a world basis as we had hoped, we must proceed on a regional basis." In other words, the democratic powers that believe in the U. N. principle will have to find ways of upholding that principle in spite of Russian obstruction.

To dump the Berlin problem into the hands of the Security Council and do nothing more would indeed be equivalent to striking a mortal blow at the U. N. But the founders at San Francisco did not leave the democratic powers in any such helpless position. They left the door wide open to regional agreements within the spirit and framework of the U. N. When the whole body cannot function, its sound parts can carry on until it once more becomes possible for the peace-keeping organization to operate on a world-wide scale. If Russia provokes such a regional set-up among the democratic powers by refusing to permit a peaceful solution of the Berlin dispute in the Security Council, she will have only herself to blame. And if the upshot should be Russian withdrawal from the U. N., that would be unfortunate but infinitely less tragic than would be a power vacuum in the U. N. in this period of its grave trial.

Maryland Murder

Twelve days have elapsed since the murders of Miss Mary C. Kline of Glen Burnie, Md., and her escort, John H. Mahlan; but the authorities are apparently no nearer to a solution of the case than they were when the corpses of the pair were discovered on an unfrequented road not far from Annapolis. An autopsy report by the medical examiner of Baltimore appears to have discredited the original police hypothesis that the young woman had been raped before she was slain and that her escort met his death in a struggle with her assailants.

The medical examiner's report does not, of course, obviate the possibility that rape may have been contemplated by the assailants. Rape is a crime, formerly rare in this part of the world, which, if we may trust police reports, has lately become almost commonplace. Governor Lane is said to have become personally agitated about the murder and to have placed all the facilities of the State at the service of the Anne Arundel County police. The assistance of experts of the FBI is also said to have been invoked. But all these reports may merely be intended to disguise the fact that the authorities are utterly at a loss about where to search for the murderers.

For the moment, then, the chief significance of the case appears to be that so many persons of criminal or psychopathological tendencies are on the loose that it is impossible for even the best organized police force to patrol the countryside in a manner that will afford any guarantee of safety to those who use the roads after dark.

Atomic Spies

The Thomas Committee's long-heralded report on atomic espionage has at last been delivered. The waiting public, its appetite whetted by skillful advance publicity, can judge whether the document lives up to the committee's promise that it would be on a par with the Canadian Royal Commission report. In our opinion, it falls short by quite a margin of equaling the thoroughness of the Canadian model and fails completely to match the reliability of that report.

This is not from any lack of effort on the part of the Thomas Committee and its staff. The committee's analysis gives evidence of a valiant effort to produce a reasonably sober, if very sketchy, summary of the testimony presented to it. The fault lies in the committee's own record. It has cried "Wolf! Wolf!" so often in the past, with such little regard for sound and seasoned analysis of all the evidence, that its present conclusions cannot be taken at full face value.

This is not to say that the evidence disclosed in the report is false. It may be true. But the committee has so grievously abused the processes of legislative investigation for purposes of publicity and political gain that nothing it now says, even on so serious a matter as atomic espionage, unfortunately, can carry the weight it should. The crying shame of the committee's whole history comes now to the surface in the circumstance that its findings require still another investigation to establish their authenticity. For this situation the committee has only itself to blame.

Much the same can be said of its charge that the Administration has deliberately held back prosecution. The facts and allegations revealed in the committee's report, as it says, have almost certainly been known to the FBI for two or three years, and the report vigorously raises the question why nothing has been done by the Justice Department. Even though a partisan animus may be laid to the Republican majority of the committee in talking about the Administration's "iron curtain," the question itself needs answering. And with the disclosure of names and circumstances said to constitute an espionage plot, the department cannot any longer avoid taking action or explaining why it has failed to do so. Simple justice to the individuals concerned makes it now imperative to establish the facts of guilt or innocence, something which the Thomas Committee in its flamboyant way can never hope to accomplish.

Industrial Peace

It is indeed unusual to see a study made, not of the causes of labor-management discord, but of the reasons why union-employer harmony exists in certain industries. If for no other reason than that it presents a welcome positive approach to problems in this critical area, the National Planning Association's new series on Causes of Industrial Peace Under Collective Bargaining merits widespread public attention.

The first study encompasses the Crown Zellerbach Corp., a large West Coast paper manufacturer, in its relations with the AFL International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers. The analysis reveals no secret formula for labor peace. Rather it is an account of good faith and respect on both sides, and a genuine wish to see collective bargaining work.

Industrial relations in the paper industry have had the advantage of a homogeneous labor supply. Operations have been fixed rather than transitory, and hence employment has been steady. This has made it to the employers' interest to get along with the unions. The unions have felt secure from attack. For their part they have responded to this treatment with a deep concept of responsibility, going to the extent of disciplining recalcitrant members for infractions. Contracts have been strictly observed, and both parties have shown a willingness to settle grievances without resort to outside help. The result has been beneficial to labor, management and the public. Wages have run about 30 per cent above the average for the rest of the paper industry. Stability has enabled the corporation to return reasonably high profits, and there has been an absence of any collusive action to raise prices.

A significant factor in maintaining peace has been the existence of region-wide bargaining. The report lays great emphasis on negotiations on an industry rather than a craft basis and raises an apprehensive note about the future:

> New uncertainty has been introduced by the Taft-Hartley Act which gives preference to craft bargaining units. This could threaten the industry-wide bargaining mechanism which has functioned so successfully in the industry as an instrument of industrial peace. In this complex industry as many as 15 to 20 individual craft unions might become involved, each with its separate contract and possibly conflicting aspirations. Instead of single negotiations, there might be many negotiations to conduct, jurisdictional rivalries and greater possibilities of strikes.

It is neither practicable nor wise to draw implications respecting all industry from experience in one industry. Nevertheless, the National Planning Association study commends itself to unions and employers generally, and especially to Congress, as at least a codification of good practices deserving the scrutiny of everyone sincerely interested in promoting amicable labor relations.

Ickes On Oil

I ask your indulgence to comment on a letter you printed on September 17 from Mr. Charles D. Drayton, paying his respects to me on the subject of the world's oil. In order to justify Mr. Drayton's characterization of my letter of September 8 as having exhibited "characteristic ill temper," Mr. Drayton whips himself up into quite a state of mind of his own.

I did not overlook the percentages of oil production cited by H. G. Moulton in his series in The Washington Post, both in the United States and in other parts of the world, behind the so-called iron curtain, and by the United States outside of American territory. Assuming that his figures were valid, I merely observed that while oil was plentiful and cheap in foreign fields, it might be regarded as sound statesmanship to import all that we could while saving some of our own.

Mr. Drayton points to the investment by American companies in the Middle East oil fields, which he insisted, "will involve a total investment of one billion dollars or more, (and) not only will provide oil for the military requirements of the United States in some future global war but will also supply the needs of western Europe, our possible allies, and the excess requirements of the Eastern Hemisphere and eventually of the growing requirements of the United States." But he did not give the vitally important information as to how we could supply ourselves and our allies from these fields in the event of a war with Russia, which is the only war that can remotely be seen upon the horizon.

Mr. Drayton does not hesitate to attempt to discredit the Supreme Court on account of its decision in the Tidelands case. He dissents from the Supreme Court and insists that it disregarded a long line of precedents. Personally, I do not believe this, and as between a 6-to-3 decision by the Supreme Court and Mr. Drayton, I will take my law from the former.

On one point, Mr. Drayton is correct. I did hold in a case that came before me in December of 1933, when I had just put my feet under my new desk in the Interior Department, that the title to the California tidelands belonged to California. That had been the law as maintained in Interior long before I came to Washington, and one does not investigate every case de novo, unless he has some prima facie reason for doing so. However, Mr. Drayton carefully neglected to say that I did not regard myself as omniscient, nor any decision unreviewable. It was I who finally questioned my own earlier decision in the tidelands case and moved for a decision by the Supreme Court.

Bomb Delivery

It may possibly be true, as L. B. M. states in his letter published September 23, that only the Air Force now has planes capable of carrying the atomic bomb. But carrying them is one thing, getting them to the target is another, and actually hitting the target is something else again.

Do we really dare trust so scarce and expensive a weapon as the atomic bomb to such a sitting duck as the B-36, which can fly barely 300 miles per hour? Can we trust it to fat, unmaneuverable bombers flying over distances so great that no fighter escort can be furnished? Would the bombs ever reach targets far within defended Russian territory before being shot down?

Or, even more important, can we waste atom bombs by entrusting them to an Air Force which, as reported by the impartial Strategic Bombing Survey, was able to average only one hit in eight in many daylight attacks on German synthetic oil plants a mile square? How many bombs will it take the Air Force to hit anything smaller than an entire city, especially against the heavy opposition entirely lacking at Hiroshima, Nagasaki, and Bikini?

I understand that Navy carrier planes perform true precision bombing. Also, from carrier bases off enemy shores, ample fighter escort can be provided. Perhaps carrier planes can be built to carry atom bombs. If so, it would seem far safer and less wasteful to let them carry scarce atomic weapons against any type of precision target, regardless of Air Force desires. This will let Air Force heavy bombers resume their proven specialty, of blanketing large areas with cheaper types of bombs, in vast tonnages, rather than take on precision tasks for which they were not designed.

Governor Dewey is going to be surprised to find when he reaches Washington next January that the place is filled with lifelong Republicans. They have been waiting here since 1933. True, they have had to wear the false whiskers of the New Deal all this time, but all the while they could sing with Robert Burns, "My Heart's in the Highlands, My Heart Is Not Here."

These 16-year dwellers in the Trojan Horse of democracy are even now busy doffing their sheep's clothing. Long, baggy trousers are being designed to slip over Jefferson's knickerbockers at the Tidal Basin Memorial; upper-case type at the GPO is being melted down, now that only some 2000 alphabetical agencies (overlooked by the Eightieth Congress) remain; Communists are busy changing their aliases from "Harry" to "Tom"; the State Department has become Dulleser and Dulleser, and some zealot is planning to alter the features of Albert Gallatin in front of the Treasury to resemble those of Andy Mellon, at the same time putting zippers on the pockets.

Yes, when Governor Dewey starts down Pennsylvania ave. on January next he will be flanked with a bodyguard bearing huge placards reading: "Sixteen Years in a Democratic House, Yo! Ho! Ho! and a bottle of cologne!"

Scientists And Politics

Regarding the letter from Stanley F. Morse published in your issue of September 22:

Very, very few scientists are Communist sympathizers or dupes. Scientists fully realize what would happen to our Nation and to science if a totalitarian state were to be established here, and are as much opposed to communism as are any others.

That free democratic institutions are being protected through congressional investigations is certainly open to question. Moreover, these investigations have caused something more than "minor inconveniences," to quote Mr. Morse. It is no "minor inconvenience" to a scientist to have his reputation smeared on the basis of incomplete and circumstantial evidence.

No objection is made to the investigation as such; it is when the fundamental rights of individuals are violated that scientists object. It would seem that all citizens, not only scientists, should be concerned about this. But in the fog of fear which surrounds many people's minds, the only thought is: expose Communists.

This may frequently be at the expense of loyal citizens. To the extent that this prevails the people of the U. S. are sacrificing their fundamental democratic system by default to their own fears. The danger from within ourselves is as great as from the Communists. The threat of communism in America is real and alarming, but certainly it cannot be overcome by losing our heads and lashing out blindly at everything that moves.

Scientists may not make the best politicians, but neither are they disqualified by their work, as implied by Mr. Morse. The scientists most active in public affairs are well informed. Certainly political matters should not be left to professional politicians alone, since free government begins to fail at precisely that point. It is the essence of our system that the politicians receive advice and guidance from an informed public.

As to scientists living in a cloistered atmosphere, that is a thing of the past. With the development of atomic energy, scientists realized that it is no longer possible to allow scientific discoveries to be released in a civilization which might be confused by such discoveries, and in which some persons would attempt to pervert the power acquired. It has become the responsibility of scientists to see that this atomic force is better understood.

It is for this reason that scientists have promoted public discussion, and have offered suggestions for solving our difficulties. The fact that some of the solutions recommended have been idealistic does not make scientists "babes in the woods."

It is high time we put some of our ideals t work, got out of old ruts, and took the great steps forward which now challenge us. To do this, we need confidence in our way of life. We must overcome fear with understanding. The scientists have heavy public responsibility for this educational process.

Mr. Morse suggests that scientists might inadvertently betray vital secrets and that "mere acquaintance with Communists" places any reputable American scientist under suspicion of collaboration. This attitude is fallacious and damaging. According to this line of thinking, we should close all of our atomic plants and laboratories because of the possibility of an accidental leak of information. Any scientist's career could be ruined merely by introducing him to a Communist, and we would shortly disqualify in one way or another most of the men on whom this Nation must rely for scientific progress and important military work.

This is not a matter of concern to only a few individuals, but reaches to the roots of our democratic structure. Is it not more reasonable to trust these men until (if at all) they are proved to be guilty by proper evidence? Are they not entitled to this as Americans?

DONALD E. ROBERTS.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Thought Police

PUBLIC opinion has come down like a ton of bricks on an extraordinary document recently released by a special House committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission. The general condemnation heaped on the committee's report is a healthy recognition of what seems to be a calculated attempt to block the channels of communication against any viewpoint even slightly unpopular.

The committee, of which Representative Forest A. Harness of Indiana is chairman, uses as a basis for attacking the Communications Commission two recent rulings.

One, known as the Port Huron decision, reaffirms what is clearly stated in the Communications Act—that radio broadcasting stations do not have the right to censor political talks.

The second—the Scott decision—reaffirms another basic principle, which is that where fundamental controversies are involved radio stations must accord time to the side that is attacked to reply. The decision, rendered in response to the demand of a professed atheist for revocation of the licenses of stations that denied him time, makes is perfectly clear that his argument is not to be arbitrarily interpreted and that the controversy must be one of genuine public interest.

In short, there was no attempt to say that atheists should be given equal time to answer all religious broadcasts. Yet, by distorting the language of the decision and calling on prejudiced witnesses, that is just what the Harness Committee tried to make out. With the most remarkable effrontery under the circumstances, the committee report accuses the FCC of "thought policing" when that is exactly what the committee is proposing.

THE COMMITTEE report is a strange document. One unidentified witness is quoted as criticizing the Scott decision because of its inexpert, irrelevant and wordy discussion of atheism and religion. That criticism, in most respects, is valid.

But the witness, one learns from reading the testimony, is Dr. Robert Calhoun of the Yale Divinity School. The committee report carefully does not quote that part of Dr. Calhoun's testimony in which he says he would not deny the right of atheists or Marxists to argue their point of view, even though to him that viewpoint seems utterly wrong.

In his enlightened and highly informed discussion of the issue, Dr. Calhoun makes many important points. But one struck me as particularly important at this moment:

"Actually, diversity of view is one of the most familiar and, in a way, one of the most exciting aspects of our American scene."

That is a truth that goes back deep in the American tradition and we should not let nervous, fearful, neurotic men divert us from it. Dr. Calhoun speaks of the danger of "a king of monolithic culture" developing in this country, which would squeeze out even feebly dissenting opinion.

We know, most of us Americans, the kind of monolithic culture in an all-powerful state that prevails in the Soviet Union, and we want none of it. But some of us are unaware that ever-narrowing control by private interests can have almost as deadly an effect as the all-powerful state. It can, in fact, and here is the danger, prepare the way for the all-powerful state.

THE HARNESS Committee is building up to a further investigation of the FCC. Its members believe they have a case in Ohio which, with some proper tailoring, can tie the Communist tag on the commission.

This appears to be the beginning of a deliberate effort to shut out any voice even a shade to the left of center. Such an effort can badly backfire, and the responsible leaders of the radio industry surely know it.

Soon to go on the air here in Washington is WCFM, a new FM station organized by cooperatives and those who believe in cooperation. Some of us have tried to help this cause along precisely because we believed, as Dr. Calhoun said, that "diversity of view" is the essence of America. Perhaps the Harness Committee will get around to finding that this is un-American.

The majority of radio stations and the networks try hard to play fair and give conflicting viewpoints a hearing. In the current campaign it has seemed to me that they have bent over backward to provide Henry A. Wallace and his Progressive Party with radio time. One large Midwestern station recently invited Glen Taylor to speak because it was felt the third party had not been given a sufficient hearing.

That is the attitude of American fair play and it is also a sound self-interest, in view of the fact that the air waves are not the property of any individual or group of individuals. If any segment of the radio industry is behind the peculiar maneuvers of the Harness Committee, it will find eventually that it is contributing to its own undoing.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Mr. Dunn's Dilemma

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Mr. Roy Dunn, best known nationally as Minnesota's Republican national committeeman, is a political landmark of this city. He is well made for a landmark, being a huge, craggy-faced, slow-moving, slow-spoken man, with an appearance of assured authority that is only enhanced by his manner of being a solid farmer at a county fair. And he has a landmark's appropriate story, being the son of very poor homesteaders who has become a rich farmer, a successful businessman and a major power in Republican politics by dint of hard work, strong character and deep shrewdness.

Back in the 1930s, when the Farmer-Laborites took over Minnesota, Roy Dunn persuaded the State's almost hysterical businessmen to keep cool and let him handle the situation. He handled it with great efficiency, using funds contributed by the quaking business groups for a successful campaign to recapture the State Legislature. He has controlled the Legislature ever since, although Harold Stassen would certainly have liked to break his power if possible.

ROY DUNN'S constituents are still the Minnesota farmers who elect him and his faithful followers to the Legislature, and the Minnesota businessmen who pay the Republican Party's bills. He can technically be called a servant of the interests. He frankly believes that what the businessman want and what the farmers want are good for Minnesota.

He gives the businessmen what they want, to the best of his ability.

He is therefore cordially detested by the State's labor groups and liberals. But it would be hard to discover any man more different from the "servant of the interests" of the Eastern urban imagination. In truth, itinerant students of politics will have to go pretty far to find a more astute or likable man, whatever they may think of his politics.

In a way, this is a very happy time for Roy Dunn. The departure of Harold Stassen to the larger opportunities of Pennsylvania has left a vacuum in Minnesota. Partly because of Dunn's control of the Legislature, the change wrought by Stassen in Minnesota Republicanism was always pretty patchy. Now the younger men who were brought into politics by Stassen are losing interest again. The Stassen group is accordingly losing strength in the Republican Party. And the faction of Roy Dunn and the businessmen, with its support from the farm vote, is recapturing control. Stassen's hand-picked Governor Youngdahl is likely to be reelected almost without opposition, but he will be an isolated figure.

DESPITE the polls, Dunn also expects to carry Minnesota for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Joseph Ball. Thus it would seem that every prospect ought to please him. But the worm in his apple of contentment still remains, in the form of a dilemma which also afflicts many comparable but much less likable Republican potentates.

As is natural in view of his background, Roy Dunn strongly favors the New Deal's farm programs, while taking a highly conservative position on labor, power and other great domestic issues. In the same way, many Eastern Republican leaders are relatively amiable toward labor, but ungenerous to the farmers and conservative about power; and Northwestern Republicans are progressive about power and reclamation policies, friendly to the farmers, and violent about labor.

Roy Dunn's dilemma can be simply stated. If the issues listed above and the others like them were submitted to a free vote by the Republicans presently in Congress, shifting majorities would give the victory to the conservative viewpoint in each case. The effect in Minnesota would be, primarily, further impairment of the Government farm programs along the lines of the grain trade lobbyists' raid on the Commodity Credit Corporation at the last session. That raid alone, by abolishing Government storage of grain given as security for parity loans, is going to force many Midwestern farmers to sell much of their huge corn crop well below the parity price. The farmers' fury will eventually be sated by victims.

IN OTHER States there would be other repercussions. Where union labor is more important, for instance, the effect of the same process would be to solidify all union members against the Republicans. Ask Roy Dunn what will happen if the next Republican Congress takes the bit in its teeth in this manner after the party has recaptured the Presidency. Being far more intelligent than many of his brethren, Dunn will tell you simply, "Why, then, the Republicans will lose the Congress in 1950 and the White House in 1952."

And precisely here is Dunn's dilemma. For if this dread development is to be averted, farm State Republicans like Dunn, for example, will have to become much more modern-minded about labor; those from less rural regions will have to acquire a new tolerance of the needs of the farmers, and the whole Republican mass will have to grow less accessible to the surviving business lobbyists.

In other words, their party's coming to power will confront men like Dunn with an unpleasing, largely unexpected choice: Either they will have to change their spots far more than they have done in the long, hard, hungry 16 years now ending, or they will have to see the power and the glory they have so longed for go glimmering again very soon. There is only one other alternative, forecast by the Dixiecrats. Perhaps we are reaching a stage when the two-party system will break down and the dominant interests in each section will try to wreak their prejudices on every other section.

Roy Dunn, who is attached to his party and to the two-party system, hopefully expects Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to solve the problem, which is perhaps the best way out for him.

Barkley Hits Dewey for Colonies Stand

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 28 (AP).—Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee, accused Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight of "embarrassing" the foreign relations of the United States.

In his first invasion of the GOP stronghold in upstate New York, Barkley said the Republican presidential nominee's public utterances on atomic energy and Italian colonies left "a hollow ring" to Dewey's promise "that he will appeal to no special interests."

Dewey's campaign declarations indicating his favor for private development of atomic energy leaves some question whether Republicans "comprehend even the meaning of the force of atomic energy," Barkley said in a speech at a Democratic rally here.

Colonies Statement Cited

"The Republican candidate has demonstrated anew and more clearly than I have ever seen it demonstrated," Barkley said, "that the chief and abiding concern of the Republican party lies in profits for a special few and that this concern even overrides the development, safety and well-being of the United States."

"This," he added, "is a matter of the utmost gravity."

"But," he said, "this is not the first time that the candidate of the Republican Party has appealed to special groups at the cost of embarrassing the foreign relations of the United States.

"At a time when negotiations were under way with Russia and other countries over the disposition of the former Italian colonies, Governor Dewey announced from Albany that he was for the restitution of these colonies to Italy."

Neither President Truman nor himself, Barkley said, "has been willing for partisan political purposes to attempt to interfere in the delicate international negotiations now going on."

Barkley referred to the Republican Party as the party of high tariffs, the enemy of public housing, the friend of the wealthy and the haven of "the exploiters and the special interests."

Thurmond Headed Here For Press Talk

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 28 (AP).—Governor J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights Democratic presidential candidate, outlined today his speaking program for the next 10 days.

He plans to leave here tomorrow night or early Thursday for Washington, D. C., where he will hold a press conference arranged by the States' Rights Democratic Washington headquarters.

From Washington, he will go to Baltimore, Md., for a speech at a States' Rights rally Friday night. The next day, he will speak at the La Plata, Md., tobacco festival.

Governor Thurmond expressed disappointment today that President Truman "has seen fit not to accept the invitation to visit South Carolina."

Mr. Truman was invited to speak in this State by Democrats who are supporting the national ticket. The South Carolina Democratic Party organization is backing Thurmond.

The President was asked to come here when he goes to the national American Legion convention at Miami, Fla., next month. Democratic national headquarters said he would be traveling by air, and, anyway, his trip would be nonpolitical.

"I had hoped," Thurmond said in a prepared statement, "that he (Mr. Truman) would come to our State and explain to our people why he saw fit to betray the principles of Jefferson and abandon the historic position of the Democratic Party on States' Rights by sending his so-called civil rights message to Congress."

Dumont Network Gets Los Angeles Station

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Dumont Television Network has signed the Don Lee television station KTSL in Los Angeles as an affiliate, it was announced today.

A joint statement by Lewis Allen Wise, president of the Don Lee Broadcasting System, and Humboldt J. Greig, Dumont sales manager, said the station would be served by film recordings until network relay facilities are extended to the Pacific Coast.

Wallace Asks Inquiry Into 'War Scares'

Dallas, Sept. 28 (AP).—Henry Wallace addressed a series of mixed white-and-Negro meetings here today without stirring up any violence or excitement. Dallas took his visit calmly.

The Progressive Party candidate for the White House continued his attacks on United States foreign policy and business interests.

In a speech prepared for delivery tonight, he demanded that a fact-finding commission be created to investigate "these recurrent war scares."

He charged Defense Secretary Forrestal with building up those "scares"—"the Communist scare" and fear of Russia—in order to serve private oil interests.

Referring to Forrestal as "a Wall Street oil banker," he said Forrestal's hands are "stained with oil," and he thinks an investigation would show they are also "stained with blood."

War Not Near, He Thinks

Wallace said he meant "the blood of men, women and children killed because they were fighting for democracy in the Near East against the opposition of Arab oil kings supported by Mr. Forrestal and men like him."

The candidate said he doesn't think there will be a war soon.

Wallace dug at President Truman again on the civil rights issue.

He said Mr. Truman's high praise of Sam Rayburn at Bonham, Tex., Democratic leader of the House, yesterday showed the President "didn't believe in the civil rights program at all . . . Sam Rayburn is a man who has boasted of his consistent record in opposing anti-poll-tax, anti-lynching and FEPC legislation."

Before the evening rally, Wallace spoke before 40 people at a breakfast held in a small Mexican restaurant, 20 women at a meeting in the Y.W.C.A. and about 75 persons at a luncheon in a Negro Y.M.C.A.

Recent New Yorker Active

He also played a set of tennis with a local Progresive Party member named Tom Morris. Wallace won, 6-2.

At the breakfast he said egg-throwing and "reaction" in the South are caused by 'Northern money."

At the women's meeting Wallace said that before the atomic bomb, perhaps mankind could survive without obeying the Sermon on the Mount, but now it's impossible. He spoke also of the horrors of radioactive dust clouds, compared with which he said scientists consider the atomic bomb "almost merciful."

This meeting was arranged by Mrs. Natalie Ross, Texas State women's chairman of the Progressive Party. Questioned by reporters, she said she moved here three months ago from New York.

At the luncheon in the Y.M.C.A. he pledged to continue his fight after the election.

Wallace exclaimed: "If I get only a thousand votes I'll keep going!"

States Rights Caucus Called

Leaders among Virginia States' Rights Democrats will confer here Thursday with their presidential candidate, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, it was announced yesterday.

The group will include Campaign Director Frank S. Richeson of Richmond, Miss Genevieve Boguess, chairman of the Thurmond banquet to be held October 8 in Richmond, and State Chairman Frank P. Burton, jr.

Burton spoke at a States' Rights rally in Charlottesville, Va., last night, under auspices of the Charlottesville - Albemarle (County) States' Rights Club.

Gallup Poll

Illinois Voters Favor Dewey After 4 Roosevelt Victories

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 28.—Illinois, which Roosevelt won in the last four elections, today gives a clear popular vote advantage to the Dewey-Warren ticket.

Institute interviewers throughout the State asked a scientific cross-section of voters this question:

"If the presidential election were being held TODAY how would you vote—for Truman or Dewey?"

The vote:

ILLINOIS
(28 electoral votes)

Dewey	49%
Truman	40
No opinion	11

Neither President Truman nor Governor Dewey plan any campaign speeches in the State. Henry A. Wallace, presidential candidate of the Progressive Party, will appear in Chicago, October 15.

Illinois voters in the survey reported today were not asked whether they would vote for Wallace. As of the moment, under two State Supreme Court rulings, Progressive Party electors will not appear on the ballot. The first decision came on an appeal to the court based on constitutional grounds; that is, the Progressive Party claimed that the present Illinois election law in regard to the number of signatures necessary for a new party is unconstitutional.

Progressives in Illinois then took new action before the State Supreme Court to obtain an order to the Board of Elections to show cause why the party's electors should not be on the ballot. The party claimed that it obtained enough signatures under the law to qualify. Last Saturday the court also turned down this petition.

Progressive Party candidates for local offices and four congressional nominees will have places on the Cook County ballot. Unless the Board of Elections is overruled, however, ballots in the rest of the State will carry no mention of the party's nominees.

Presidential election results in Illinois have in recent years closely followed the national voting pattern, being a shade less Democratic than the country as a whole.

In the last four presidential elections, for example, the Democratic vote in Illinois ranged from 2.1 to 3.8 percentage points below the national Democratic portion of the major party vote. The following table shows this interesting trend:

PER CENT DEMOCRATIC

Elections	Illinois	United States
1932	56.8%	59.1%
1936	59.2	62.5
1940	51.2	55.0
1944	51.7	53.8

In the last 12 presidential elections Illinois gave pluralities to the Democratic candidate five times and the Republican nominee seven times.

Cook County, which contains the city of Chicago, has more voters than any other county in the country. In 1944 it had a greater total of Democratic and Republican voters than any single State except New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio and California. Despite the fact that 58 per cent of the voters in Cook County were Democrats, only six States, outside of Illinois, had more Republican voters.

about a peaceful settlement even at this late hour.

"While there is hope, we will not relax our efforts to find common grounds of agreement, or cease to pray for just and peaceful solutions."

Earlier he left the train at Spokane, Wash., to address a rally in the Masonic auditorium. Here he pointed up his Portland "American close ranks" warning to Soviet rulers.

"In this grave crisis, I know that North, South, East and West, America is one country," he said.

"I wish that some of our world's rulers knew about these many kinds of Americans what you and I know about them.

"Peace, tonight, would be on firmer ground if those who may be recklessly planning war knew that—when there's a big job to be done—there is only one kind of American."

Fifteen hundred persons filled the small Spokane auditorium and police said some 2000 failed to crowd in.

For the second straight day Dewey ad libbed a strong defense of the Eightieth Congress into a prepared speech that only touched the subject, and aimed some fast rabbit punches at Mr. Truman.

Without mentioning the President by name he ridiculed his charges that "the Republicans will git you if you don't watch out," and only a Democratic administration will look out for the West.

Dewey called the Truman attack on the Eightieth Congress "hysterical," "frenzied" and "frantic."

"The Eightieth Congress delivered as no Congress ever did for the future of our country," he said.

All the way into Missoula Dewey continued to take pokes at Truman in rear platform chats at Sandpoint, Idaho, and Paradise, Mont. He said the trouble with the Truman Administration is "it is tired, tired of facing problems that are too big for it."

The stop in Idaho's northern neck was unscheduled. He used it to give Senator Dworshak (R.) a hand in his effort to hold off Bert H. Miller, Senate Democratic challenger. Dewey will return to Idaho Thursday after thoroughly stumping Montana Wednesday.

Dewey Gets Support Of Oregon Journal

Portland, Ore., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—The Oregon Journal, an independent Democratic newspaper, tonight announced its support of Republican Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey.

In a lead editorial in its final edition, the Journal said it had determined to support Dewey because of "political deterioration of the gravest kind" during recent months of the Democratic Administration."

"The country is at an all-time peak of employment and income. But a rift has widened between President Truman and the Congress until, in his current campaign journey, his speeches have progressed from censure to abuse, and to him Republicans have no shadings from light to dark. They are all bad," the Journal said.

Flynns 'Like Doves'

Hollywood, Sept. 28 (AP).—Actor Errol Flynn and his wife, Nora, are "as happy as a pair of cooing doves," his studio reported today. Only yesterday the studio quoted Mrs. Flynn as saying a serious domestic situation had developed.

Warren Urges Work, Thrift To Avoid Crash

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 28 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren, declaring a national economic collapse was not inevitable, said tonight this Nation nonetheless must face up to the real and "formidable" threat of disaster by returning to the fundamentals of industry, thrift and unity.

No magic formula exists to stave off economic disaster, the Republican vice presidential candidate said, except "those three magic words."

To meet existing economic threats, Warren includes in his prescription the necessity of increased production, tax law adjustment to encourage greater investment of surplus capital, lower taxes, and curbs on governmental spending.

Warren came here after a day of stumping Massachusetts and New Hampshire in the cause of national unity in the current political campaign.

He keynoted his appeal to start the day in Concord, N. H., where he told an audience:

"I am more interested in national unity than I am in winning the election."

As his train rolled through the Berkshires, and along the Merrimac River valley, Warren reiterated his unity plea at Nashua, N. H.; Manchester, N. H.; Lowell, Mass., and Worcester, Mass.

Coming tonight before his Hartford audience, Warren said the "good life" envisioned after the war had not yet materialized.

"Instead of realizing this dream, we find ourselves living precariously in a strange kind of prosperity. Millions of families feel that they are slowly losing out in their desperate struggle for family solvency."

It is a time for the American people, he said, to stick with the "three great fundamentals:"

"Industry—All-out, uninterrupted production for ourselves and, as far as consistent with our own welfare, for the bolstering of freedom-loving nations in their resistance to aggressors.

"Thrift—Not only individual thrift, but thrift at every level of government, particularly in our national administration.

"Unity—the unity that comes from the will of 140 million people to rise above group, sectional, racial or any other prejudice—the kind of unity that comes from an understanding of what we have been able to do in the past and from faith in an even greater future."

Richard Montgomery P-TA Meets Tonight

The Richard Montgomery High School Parent-Teacher Association will hold its first meeting of the new school year at 8 tonight in room 22 of the Rockville, Md., school building. A "meet the faculty" tea is scheduled.

Truman Calls Republican Party 'Unwitting Ally' of Reds

along the way. "I'm going to take those Republicans to town."

Approximately 100,000 persons turned out in Oklahoma's capital and biggest city to welcome the Chief Executive, about the same number as greeted Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938.

The 17 car campaign train was 45 minutes late in arriving here. This was due to Mr. Truman's insistence on talking to crowds at all the whistle stops. At one stop, Gainesville, Tex., the train took on a new passenger—Mrs. Perle Mesta, well-known Washington hostess, whose late husband made his fortune in Oklahoma. She made the journey to Oklahoma City.

Mr. Truman spoke before a crowd of 20,000 in the State fair grounds. Every seat in the grandstand was filled, and many were standing.

The President got his first big cheer when he declared that the Communists "hate" the Democratic Party. He was applauded again when he recalled how the Truman doctrine made it possible for "many nations to stand with us in opposition to Communist encroachment throughout the world."

He said that the Truman doctrine, together with the American aid given to other countries, had "checked" the Communist tide.

At the outset of his speech, Mr. Truman said he wanted the American people to consid the damage that was being done to America's national security by irresponsible persons who place their own political interests above the "security of the Nation."

He contended that the United States Government was not endangered by Communist infiltration. The FBI and other security agencies, he said were capable and alert, and would remain so.

He then accused the Republicans of "reckless tactics" and said that these tactics were a smoke screen to hide their failure to deal with housing, price control, and education.

Then, in Zola fashion, he proceeded to indict his GOP opposition, saying:

"I am forced to the conclusion that Republican leaders are thinking more about the November election than about the welfare of the country.

"I charge that the Republicans have impeded and made more difficult our efforts to cope with Communists in this country.

"I charge that they have hindered the efforts of the FBI, which has been doing wonderful work in protecting the national security.

"I charge that the Republicans have attempted to usurp the constitutional functions of Federal grand juries.

"I charge that they have not produced any significant information about Communist espionage which the FBI did not already have.

"I charge the Republicans with having impaired our Nation's atomic energy program by their intemperate and unjustified attacks on our atomic scientists.

"I charge them with having recklessly cast a cloud of suspicion over the most loyal civil service in the world.

"I charge them with having trampled on the individual freedoms which distinguished American ideals from totalitarian doctrine.

"I charge finally, that in all this, they have not hurt the Communist Party. They have helped it."

The fact of the matter is that the Republican Party is the unwitting ally of the Communists in this country. That is clearly shown in the election record of the Communist Party."

He then recited how the Communist vote reached its peak of 100,000 in 1932, fell off to 80,000 in the Roosevelt landslide of '36 and dropped to 46,000 votes in 1940.

Statement on Wallace

There was no Communist presidential candidate in 1944, he recalled, and pointed out that there is none this year. He then made the statement that the Communists are backing Henry Wallace and the third party to hurt the Democratic ticket and help the Dewey-Warren ticket.

Mr. Truman said that his administration directed an attack on subversive organizations and persons in the United States long before the Republicans "started their Communist talk for political purposes."

"Since 1939," he said, "the employes of the Government have been required to swear under oath that they are not Communists. That means that there is not one single employe of the Federal Government who is an admitted Communist."

But Communists are trained to lie, he said, and in 1947 he set up the loyalty program to check on all Federal employes and discharge them if they were found to be Communists.

This, he pointed out, meant the checking of more than two million Government workers by FBI agents.

FBI Loyalty Check

"Their check showed," he said, amidst applause, "that the loyalty of 99.7 per cent of all Federal workers was not even questionable."

Only in the case of about 6000 Government workers has loyalty been found doubtful, Mr. Truman said, adding: "That's an amazing record. It is proof of the vigilance of the Government that so small a number of disloyal men and women has been able to work their way into Federal jobs."

The crowd broke in with applause, one of 18 such interruptions, when Mr. Truman said: "In periods of tension such as the present, loose charges against individuals are all too frequent. An innocent man may easily find himself accused of terrible things.

"I am determined that Communists shall not work for the Government. I am equally determined that loyal employes against whom unfounded charges are made shall not suffer injustice."

When Mr. Truman stopped at Ardmore, Okla., on the way here, a crowd of 40,000 turned out for him—twice the town's population. An old friend there called him "Harry," and it led him to tell the crowd:

"All over the country they call me Harry. When I was down in Mexico City, they had tremendous crowds out, and they would say, 'Allo 'Arry. I like it. I like it. I believe when you speak to me like that you really do like me—and I want you to like me, because I'm trying to serve you with everything I have. And if you are pleased with it I am the happiest man in the world."

Political analysts here said that Oklahoma was a doubtful State, but leaned toward the Truman-Barkley ticket. They said that former Gov. Robert S. Kerr, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, was a heavy betting favorite to beat his Republican opponent. Representative Ross Rizley.

Student Jailed For Failure to Sign in Draft

Portland, Me., Sept. 28 (AP).—A Portland predivinity student, who would be exempt from service, today was sentenced to prison for two years for refusing to register in the draft.

Federal Judge John D. Clifford, jr., said his sentence passed on Ralph E. Cook, 19, was the first under the Selective Service Act of 1948.

Cook, a sophomore at Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., pleaded guilty. He is the son of the Rev. Lindley J. Cook, former pastor of a Friends' Church here, and field director of the Maine Council of Churches.

The judge said that it was "quite irrelevant" that Cook, as a predivinity student, would have been exempt if he had registered. Then he added:

"The act of registration is the keystone of the system devised by Congress."

Acacia to Give 'Living-Cost' Pay Increase

By S. Oliver Goodman

More than 800 Washington employes of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. will receive a monthly cost-of-living allowance equal to 10 per cent of the first $300 of their monthly salary.

President William Montgomery announced yesterday that the first allowance will be included in paychecks received tomorrow.

In addition, Montgomery said that a special lump-sum allowance of 5 per cent of the first eight months' salary up to $2400 will be paid at the end of this year to all employes whose service dates prior to September 1.

About 200 office employes outside of Washington also will share in the extra pay for this month and the retroactive allowance. Elected officers and sales representatives of Acacia are not eligible.

The program, Montgomery said, is designed to help Acacia employes meet steadily increasing living costs. It will add $113,000 to Acacia's payroll for this year and if continued through 1949 will amount to another $200,000.

Government Employes Insurance Co., another Washington firm, recently geared a cost-of-living allowance for its employes to the Bureau of Labor Statistics consumers price index.

Dewey's Inflation Talk Soars Above Politics and Economics

By J. A. Livingston

GOVERNOR DEWEY knows what inflation is all about. He made that clear in his talk in San Francisco when he said: "High prices have followed all wars." Then he explained the economics of it: "In wartime, the Government spends a lot of money to pay for munitions and supplies. The normal production of all kinds of goods is stopped to produce for war (so people save money). Then, after the war there is a huge supply of money and no goods to buy." Prices go up.

Livingston

Such a statement is smart politics as well as correct economics. By not putting all the inflation blame on the Democrats, Dewey rises above personalities and trivialities. He reveals himself as a man who sees, or is trying to see, problems in the large. He keeps his campaign on a high plane. President Truman, on the other hand, tries to make out that a Republican Congress is solely responsible for high prices.

Once on his high plane, Dewey never gets down to earth. His words are sharp and sound well. But they don't land. He declares: "We can start dealing frankly and honestly with the problem. We can start going to its fundamentals. With sound leadership and courage, we can lick it."

THEN DEWEY sets forth a six-point anti-inflation program. It follows, with comments:

1. "I propose that we bring to Washington an Administration of able and honest men who have the courage to tackle this problem of high prices and inflation and tackle it effectively." That's Dewey's I-can-do-it-better theme. But it doesn't lick inflation.

2. "I propose that we put a brake on unnecessary Government spending." The catch here is that in tense times like these—with United States-Russian relations tightening—doing away with Government expenditures is anything but easy. Once upon a time, a man named Franklin D. Roosevelt promised to eliminate Republican waste and balance the budget. He became the greatest presidential spender in history. Candidates often promise economy, but events determine expenditures.

3. "I propose that we start systematically paying off our national debt." Comment: Same as No. 2.

4. "I promise you that in your next national Administration there will be no place, high or low, for anyone to speculate in grain—or any other commodity—at the price of human misery." This is undoubtedly aimed at Edwin W. Pauley, oil millionaire and former Special Assistant to Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, and Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, the President's personal physician, but it has nothing to do with reducing high prices.

5. "I propose to bring to Washington men and women of integrity, whose first interest is not self-interest." Dewey could use a good copy-editor. Sounds mighty like item No. 1.

6. "As a sixth and perhaps most important step, I propose that we start vigorously supporting our American system of free opportunity . . . We shall release the initiative, the enterprise and the creative powers of our people in a great upsurge of production . . . A large part of the answer to inflation is to produce more and still more of the things our people want and need." Again, there's a catch:

AMERICAN production is already at the highest peacetime level in history. The country has full employment. Manpower is short. So are raw materials, like steel and nonferrous metals. Any upturn in output will depend on increased productivity: Technological improvement, better managerial methods, increased worker efficiency. None comes overnight or by presidential fiat.

In San Francisco, in contrast to his speech in Albuquerque, Dewey didn't praise the last Congress for cutting taxes. He simply asserted that the Government can be a "powerful aid" to increased production through "tax policies which stimulate new ventures, which aim to encourage the investor and the producer, not punish them." Yet, as already noted, production is just about at capacity. Nor has business, by and large, lacked for financing. Indeed, in the weekend of September 15, industrial, commercial and agricultural loans rose more than 250 million dollars—to the highest level in history.

Dewey said nothing about bank credit. He avoided the basic inflation question of the times: Should or should not the Federal Reserve Board continue to support the Government bond market and thus pump money into the economy? But the Republican candidate did not forget where 50.3 per cent of the votes came from in the 1944 election. He went all out in praise of American womanhood in the war on high prices. He exclaimed:

"And what a magnificent job our wives and mothers have been doing to get the last stretch out of our dollars. If our National Government managed its household affairs half as well, we would have fewer problems today."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP).—Grain futures prices moved higher today on buying attributed to mills and export interests.

Wheat climbed more than 2 cents a bushel at times on purchases by mills and houses with export connections. The Government announced that it had reentered the market for flour for shipment to Atlantic ports.

Some buying and short covering in corn was based on reports that the Government loan rate will be about $1.43 a bushel on farms, or about 1.57 Chicago basis. This is about 18 cents above the December futures price here. The fact that corn prices are below the probable loan rate is keeping producers from shipping their grain to market, traders said.

Wheat futures closed 1 to 2¼ cents higher than the previous finish. December 2.25⅝@2.25½; corn was up 2¼ to 3¼ cents, December 1.39@1.39½; oats were ⅛ higher; December 73⅝@73¾, and soybeans were up 4¾ to 5½ cents, November 2.40¾@2.40½.

Many Nations Do Too Little About Inflation, Report Says

eastern and western Europe. Later he told reporters: "The aim of ERP is world recovery and the aim of the Fund is world recovery. For that reason the Fund will be definitely interested in what ERP does now and in the future."

Another aspect of ERP was mentioned by Pieter Lieftinck, the Netherlands Minister of Finance, who saw inflationary possibilities in improper use of the local currency funds set aside by recipient countries. Under the European recovery legislation, each country must put into a special fund amounts of its own currency equivalent to the amount of its free grants from the United States.

Two Main Concerns

The annual report of the Monetary Fund made two main points—the first, the need for Europe to produce more efficiently and to cut its costs; and the second, the need to keep active inflation in check and to get rid of the "latent" inflation now hidden in many countries by price controls and rationing.

As to the first, the report pointed out that only a small part of the increases in Europe's exports in 1947 went to the Western Hemisphere, even though there was no slackening in the Western Hemisphere's demand for Europe's goods.

"For the restoration of international balance, increased productive efficiency and expansion of output are clearly of basic importance," the report said.

European countries especially were urged to limit their capital investments to those projects that promise quick returns in dollar-earning exports.

As to inflation, the report recalled the rise in prices in the United States, and its effect elsewhere, and went on to say: "The continuance of inflation in France and Italy in 1947 was not, however, the result only of accumulated purchasing power; it was partly the result of failure to bring currently generated monetary demand into balance with available supplies, although in Italy a restraint was placed on this demand in the latter part of 1947 by the adoption of a more restrictive credit policy."

In some other countries, the report said, price controls and rationing "appear to have hampered production and weakened the incentive to work." But the report mentioned Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, the Netherlands, Norway and Yugoslavia as countries which have tried, "with varying degrees of success," to deal with latent inflation by monetary reforms which wiped out or neutralized some of the purchasing power in the hands of the public.

Dealing with currencies the report said many nations' economies were too unbalanced to be corrected by adjusting exchange rates.

"There are indications, however, that in some countries the exchange rate is becoming a restraining factor on exports and is adding to the difficulty of earning convertible currencies," the report said.

"When an exchange rate is no longer appropriate the Fund will, of course, give prompt and realistic consideration to a member's request for adjustment in the par value of its currency."

The Fund's membership committee yesterday approved Siam's request to join as the forty-eighth member-nation, subject to the approval of the board of governors later this week.

This morning John J. McCloy, president of the International Bank, will submit his organization's annual report to the governors.

Dodge Warns ABA of More Federal Curbs

Detroit, Sept. 28 (AP).—The problem of controlling the use of credit, by the Federal Government as well as the country banker, dominated discussions and speeches at the seventy-fourth annual convention of the American Bankers Association today.

Bankers have been rubbed sore by criticism of their lending policies. They are proud of their voluntary anti-inflation program, which has been commended by President Truman and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, and they are resentful, and fearful, of the prospect that further Administrative steps will be taken to curb their lending ability.

Joseph M. Dodge, president of the ABA who is scheduled to retire on Wednesday, said anti-inflationary legislative acts of the Congress have been almost entirely directed at the operations of the banks of the country.

At the same time, he declared, the ABA's anti-inflation and credit-control program has produced results beyond anyone's initial expectations.

The banker called on members of the association to be "national leaders in sound opinion and in constructive action" in the fight against inflation.

He warned them, at the time, "that the view of banking from Washington invariably is in terms of more and more Federal regulation and control."

New Cars Seen Losing Market

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—A banker long active in automobile installment financing told the motor car industry today it faces possible catastrophe in loss of its mass consumer market for new cars.

Arthur J. Morris, founder of the Morris Plan Bank and chairman of the Industrial Bank of Commerce, New York, said high prices are causing a shift of buying from new to used cars.

He addressed the National Used Car Dealers Association convention here.

He suggested dealers combine to put used cars in dependable running condition and take over the auto market.

Reporting he saw a definite slump in the "new-used" market on more expensive models, Morris called statements it would be impossible for manufacturers to meet the demand until the end of 1951 "organized propaganda."

He urged car makers to produce "a smaller car at a cheaper price—to deliver between $1000 and $1500," in order to preserve their mass consumer market.

Shoe Firm Cuts Output

St. Louis, Sept. 28 (AP).—International Shoe Co. announced today it is reducing production of men's shoes temporarily because of lower production requirements. The company, one of the largest manufacturers in its field, has curtailed operations at 10 of its factories in Missouri and Illinois to four days a week, effective this week.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Cotton futures advanced today and closed 60 cents to 1.35 a bale higher; contributing to the upward trend was a fairly large amount of textile buying, the most impressive witnessed in about one month. In addition to mill demand there was buying which was presumed to be covering against export sales.

It was reported that the French had asked for offers on 100,000 bales of United States cotton, offers on part of the cotton had already been made. In addition it was expected that Belgium and Austria would shortly be in the market for cotton. All the cotton would be for shipment by the end of October.

Engrossing Film Uses Old Theme

By Richard L. Coe

THE PSYCHIATRIC movie stream isn't dried up after all. A taut, neatly dovetailed story of the problems of a mind doctor and his patients arrives today at the Playhouse, "Mine Own Executioner," and it's an engrossing picture.

What sets this Alexander Korda production apart from the draggle-tailed end of the mental miseries spate is that its doctor, the film's central character, is portrayed as a normal, average man whose work just happens to be other people's problems. As Burgess Meredith compellingly plays him, he's an immensely real individual. He's not after anyone's fortune, he's not on the verge of mayhem, he's not in a mental whirligig himself, though for a while he fears he must be.

Coming on top of the succession we've had of goggle-eyed eccentrics who were either murder-bent or just inoffensively looney, such a concept is like a gust of fresh air. Mind doctors, as well as movie audiences, who've tired of mere sensationalism on this theme, should at last be pleased with an intelligent reflection.

The story is intricate but hardly complex. Meredith, who has a sound background for his ministrations to shattered minds but no medical degree, is busy at his work, respected by his colleagues and understood by his wife.

Terrorized by Japs

A case which gives him much trouble is that of a former fighter pilot, once a tortured prisoner of the Japs, who has attempted to kill his wife. Probing for the reasons for this, Meredith uncovers the fact that the flier, after fiendish torture, gave the enemy more information than "name, rank and serial number." Preying on his subconscious is the urge to escape the camp, and in the half-light he still sees the Jap guards he must kill to get away.

Meredith's handling of the case is marred by his own overwork, the sense that everything must go from his spirit to his patient's so that he lacks proper tenderness for his wife, a guilty association with one of her beautiful frends an a mild illness. As a result of these personal matters, the flier's case careens to disaster.

The story (from a novel by Nigel Balchin) builds slowly, but the time is spent in establishing the human relationships which so exhaust the doctor. And it climaxes to a corking finale of excitement.

Meredith's Best Recent Role

By underlining the essential normalcy of the psychiatrist, suggesting that the human turmoil he lives with can sometimes make him question his own adequacy, and by presenting him in settings and approach of reasonable naturalness, the character becomes real. Meredith plays him with steady competence, and it's his best part in years.

The balance of the cast is British, including Dulcie Gray as his wise wife, Christine Norden as her flirtatious friend and John Laurie as a friendly Harley Streeter. Kieron Moore, who was so insufficient opposite Vivien Leigh in "Anna Karenina," is fine as the flier, which seems to account for his popularity with the British public. The efficient Korda production was directed by Anthony Kimmins.

THE PIX double-bill parade continues with two French films, "Confessions of a Rogue" and "Her First Affair." . . . The first stars Louis Jouvet in a series of five roles, all of them "rogueish," generally acting as an inoffensive double for a criminally-minded twin . . . The second capitalizes on the recent Hollywood success of Louis Jourdan, who shares top billing with Danielle Darrieux, who plays a young chit fond of reading the lonely hearts ads.

THE SHAKESPEARE season, soon to bring us Olivier's "Hamlet" at the Playhouse and the Little, gets off to an early start with the Dupont revival of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." . . . Max Reinhardt filmed the comedy for Warners in 1935 with this stunning cast: Olivia de Havilland, James Cagney, Joe E. Brown, Mickey Rooney, Ian Hunter, Veree Teasdale, Hobart Bosworth, Jean Muir, Ross Alexander, Grant Mitchell, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Anita Louise, Victor Jory and Arthur Treacher.

ALEXANDRIA'S Virginia Theater has a more than worthwhile benefit scheduled for tomorrow night . . . The picture is "The Emperor Waltz," one of the year's shrewdest comedies, and the benefit will aid the family of the late Policeman Robert Harris, the young officer recently killed in the line of duty . . . The Virginia's manager, Valentine Smith, emphasizes that "we are trying to avoid any appeal to maudlin sentimentality or any angle that might prove embarrassing to Mrs. Harris or her youngster. Rather, we are trying to sell it on its merits as good entertainment. Tickets priced at $1.50 are now on sale at all Alexandria drug stores, theaters, the Gazette, Station WPIK and at police headquarters." . . . If it's witty, tuneful entertainment you are after, "The Emperor Waltz" is surely it.

"ISRAEL IN ACTION" and "The Illegals," the two state of Israel films whose showing was postponed by the assassination of Count Bernadotte, will be screened tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 in the Interior Auditorium . . . Invitations for the postponed showing will be valid for Thursday afternoon.

U.S. Oil Men Charge Coercion

Vienna, Austria, Sept. 28 (AP).—Two American oil men said today police in Communist Hungary forced them to sign confessions of sabotaging production in the Hungarian plant of the Standard Oil Co. (N. J.).

Paul Ruedemann, Hartsdale, N. Y., chairman of the American-owned Hungarian company, and his deputy, George Bannantine, St. Louis, Mo., were expelled from Hungary Saturday after seven days of questioning.

They said Hungarian police told them "go along with us or we will find a way to make you."

Said Ruedemann: "It was a case of sign or else."

Before leaving by plane for New York City they denied all charges, and said the entire case was part of a government campaign to take over the American-owned plant. They predicted all American interests in Hungary would meet a similar fate.

Ruedemann said he was questioned for 24 hours, given a few hours sleep, then questioned for another 20 hours.

Ruedemann estimated the physical assets of his company, excluding oil itself, at 25 million dollars. The entire Lispe fields are now under government control, he added.

He said one of the charges of the Hungarian government was that the fields produced more for the Nazis than the Communists. They ignored the answer the Americans had no control over production at either time.

(In Budapest, the Hungarian government issued a white book purporting to be a historical survey of the company. One chapter deals with its alleged cooperation with the Germans during the war, and quotes Ruedemann as testifying, "I knew that the rapidly increasing production helped the German machine, still I did not do anything to decrease production.")

Report on Polk Murder Probe Given Ad Club

A first-hand report of the investigation of the death of George Polk, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, who was murdered in Greece, was given to the Advertising Club of Washington yesterday.

The progress report was made by Theodore H. Koop, director of CBS News and Public Affairs in Washington, at the Ad Club's weekly luncheon at the Statler Hotel. Koop is one of the men serving as a liaison man between CBS and the State Department in the investigation.

With Koop's report, came a promise that if CBS finds the Greek government is not conducting a thorough inquiry into the so-called "political" murder, it will ask the United States Government to enter a formal protest to Greece.

The Ad Clubbers heard a vivid description of how Polk's body was found, his hands and feet trussed, and a bullet wound in the back of his head, in Salonika Bay last May, after he had disappeared mysteriously from his hotel a week earlier.

Since then, CBS has sent representatives on a number of trips to Greece to follow the probe of Polk's death, Koop said. Also investigating the murder is a committee of newspapermen, headed by Columnist Walter Lippmann. Serving as counsel of the committee is William J. Donovan, former head of the Office of Strategic Services, who had made several trips to Greece since Polk's death.

The latest development in the case came September 20, when Gregorius Stachtopoulus, a Greek newspaperman, and his mother were taken into custody, according to Koop.

He said Stachtopoulus may have been the last person Polk contacted in his efforts to arrange a secret meeting with the leaders of the Greek guerillas. Greek police report that the handwriting of the Greek newspaperman's mother closely resembles that on an envelope, containing Polk's War Department identity card, which was mailed to Greek police a day after Polk's disappearance, Koop said.

Hartley Would Call Congress in Strike

Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr. (R., N. J.,) yesterday told newsmen he would favor a special session of Congress to deal with the West Coast shipping strike, if President Truman considered it "threatening national health and safety."

"We've called special sessions for less reason," he commented, adding that he felt the same about the strike in the oil industry.

"We mustn't consider the shortage of fuel oil and gasoline alone in the latter strike," he said. "We must think in terms of gasoline to get workers to their jobs." He later mentioned the threatened strike in the communncations industry.

The co-author of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act added several suggestions to "strengthen" the present law. The news conference in his office was called to unveil to the press his new book "Our New National Labor Policy" published by Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York, in association with Modern Industry Magazine. ($2.85).

Hartley, who is not a candidate for reelection, also recommended a change in the law, which he admitted would find difficulty in passing Congress, to "restrict the National Labor Relations Board from barging in on welfare funds if we are to continue having Social Security. I don't think we can have both," he said.

With a reference to John L. Lewis as "the No. 1 oil burner salesman in the country," he added that he might recommend broadening the Social Security coverage. "I would prefer to see the job done that way," he said.

He said the restrictions on labor imposed by the Taft-Hartley Act were much to be preferred to the "diabolical monstrosity the President suggested two years ago for drafting the railroad men into the Army."

In his book, which carries a foreword by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), Hartley suggested the following amendments to the law, which, he wrote, "I leave to my successor and those working with him":

First, "and most important, Congress should take away from labor its immunities from prosecution under the antitrust acts, with particular reference to Nation-wide work stoppages."

"Second, almost equal in importance, is a right-to-work statute, emphasizing the proper role of peaceful picketing."

Third, clarification and extension of the anti-Communist provisions, with stronger penalties against union officials who refuse to sign an anti-Communist oath.

Democracy in Unions

Fourth, an amendment establishing certain standards for internal union procedures to promote greater democracy within unions.

Fifth, "we may have to clarify the ban against political expenditures by unions."

Sixth, clearer definition of terms for collective bargaining, and prohibitions on NLRB to prevent its enforcing compulsory bargaining outside those terms. This includes his proposed ban against considering pension and welfare funds in negotiations.

Seventh, more effective provisions against featherbedding practices.

Another suggested change is eliminating the provision in the present law requiring an NLRB election on the union shop.

"More than being unsatisfactory," he said, "the union shop clauses have been the direct cause of more unfavorable publicity to the Taft-Hartley Act than any other single provision," he wrote.

At his conference he also suggested that the law should outlaw mass picketing and limit the right to picket to persons employed in the plant.

Grain Exports Near '47 Mark Despite 'Cut'

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

In spite of an inter-cabinet row over grain exports this year, the United States is shipping abroad approximately the same amount as it did last year.

Last year's American exports were the greatest for any nation at any time.

Several weeks ago Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer announced that he would oppose duplicating last year's grain exports. The grain should be kept in this country, he averred, as a means of depressing the high cost of food.

"It is time to give the American housewife a break," he remarked.

As a member of the Cabinet Food Committee, he disagreed with the other two members, Secretary of State Marshall and Agriculture Secretary Brannan, both of whom wanted to maintain last year's record rate. They were supported by Dr. Dennis A. FitzGerald, food adviser to Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman.

Sawyer Wins on Paper

Sawyer won—on paper. Allocations for the last two quarters this year (the first two of the crop year) were held down to about 286 million bushels, against shipments last year in that period of 327 million bushels.

However, supplemental allocations have brought that total up to 312 million bushels.

But actual shipments have ignored the allocations. In July, August and September total grain exports will reach five million long tons—exactly the same as a year ago. (In terms of wheat, five million long tons would total about 185 million bushels.)

Exports totaled about 380,000 tons less in July than a year ago; but in August they were about 160,000 more and this month about 220,000 more.

Problem of Storage

Agriculture officials contend such exports are necessary to save a lot of this year's tremendous harvests. There isn't enough storage in this country to handle all without danger of widespread spoilage.

In order to increase domestic storage, Agriculture officials are holding meetings in the farm belt to instruct farmers on how to build approved farm storage bins. With such storage the farmers will be entitled to borrow from the Government at the price support levels.

In some sections lack of proper storage is forcing many farmers to sell their grains at below the support levels.

Agriculture officials also point out that scientific farming has so increased yields that even a poor crop year now probably would produce more grain than bad years before the war. In spite of large exports local supplies will be more than ample to meet all domestic needs, they declare.

They also feel that now is the time to ship grain abroad for storage there in case of need later on when shipping may become difficult. The grain could remain in foreign bins until next year after home-grown crops are exhausted.

U. S. Tobacco Men Rebuffed By Hoffman

By the United Press

The tobacco industry tried hard, but failed, yesterday to get Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hoffman to push American tobacco into dollar-hungry European countries.

A delegation of Southern Congressmen and tobacco growers pleaded with Hoffman for two hours to "protect the foreign market" for American tobacco against Greek, Turkish and Rhodesian competition. Hoffman listened patiently, but had this to say in the end:

"I would be opposed to distorting the historic trade pattern of Europe in favor of American industry. The big difficulty is the lack of dollars, and I, for one, don't see how you can afford to stop Norway from swapping fish for Greek tobacco if Norway can't afford the dollars for American.

"I'm sorry, gentlemen, if you don't like that, but that's where I stand."

Hoffman has been under constant pressure to use ECA funds for prunes, grapefruit juice, cane sugar, syrup and other goods which are in surplus here but not really needed or even wanted in Europe.

Pressure from the tobacco industry has been the strongest of all, with the argument that Congress wanted ECA to prevent the development of foreign trade patterns adverse to American producers.

The most consolation Hoffman gave the tobacco group yesterday was an assurance that four million dollars' worth of American tobacco would move to Germany immediately, another four million in December and another in January. Part of the shipments to Germany will be financed by Department of Agriculture funds.

Hoffman assured his callers that he was aware of tobacco's usefulness in stimulating production, but he insisted he could not use ECA funds to "subsidize" American industry.

He reminded them that if the United States could achieve European recovery and American prosperity, it would "keep the free nations united—and that's the most important thing on earth."

"If we can stay together," he said, "then Mr. Stalin won't march."

PERSONALITIES, traits and characteristics have always intrigued people. More methods of defining them have been dreamed up than enough. Ruby Newman, the new orchestra leader in the Statler Embassy Room, has one that he swears by. Ruby claims he can usually peg a woman by the rhythm of the song she requests. Take the girl who likes the Samba and keeps pestering the band leader to play more and more of them. If you could get to know the girl you'd probably find that she's the flighty type who can't sit still for a minute. She loses interest in things for no just cause. You men had better watch it when the G. F. starts dragging you to the south of the border dance spots. Could be she has her eye on someone that doesn't go by your name

Newman

The waltz fan? Now there's a girl who'll stick to the home fires. Probably great with a needle and thread. Her only use for a rolling pin is to flatten a pie crust. Come a few children and she'll walk around with a matronly smile come hell or high water.

The gal who can do a rumba without throwing her sacre-er, her spine—out of shape is on the refined side. She's good company and won't ever stand you up on a date. Her beaux never have to wait for her while she slaps that extra coat of lipstick or nail polish on. On the other side of the rumba is the gal who makes a Kansas twister look like the Rock of Gibraltar. Take Ruby's word and start running.

Jitterbugs, in Ruby's opinion, are immature and hardly worth trying to figure out. When their mainsprings begin to unwind and their taste in dances improves, then they're worth considering.

The polka addict usually turns out to be a quiet girl whose worst vice is taking a quick puff on a mild chocolate cigarette after a heavy dinner. Her tastes are simple and she's as steady as a rock.

Another point about dancing is the fact that people will spend small fortunes on the education of their children. They'll break their arms if they use the wrong fork at the dinner table and the word ain't is strictly punishable. Every attention is paid to the polishing of the little angels, but never a thought is given to their dancing. They can roll out broad A's till the cows come home, but only succeed in rolling into other dancers on the floor. Ruby figures it's as important to be a good dancer as it is to be a good conversationalist. Who'd have thought there was so much to be seen on the dance floor.

THE Kuehn Brothers in the Neptune Room will be holding forth there for some time. Customers are still requesting tunes and as long as they continue to do that the boys will stay.

Speaking of requests, Pianist Harry Orns and Organist Murray Lane in the Sheraton Lounge have rolled up a total of 352 requests in the past six weeks. They've answered 235 of them. When the boys run across a stumper they try to learn it. They average five new tunes a week, which, added to the number they play in the lounge, begins to look quite formidable.

Normandy Farm is featuring a new dish called Ishmala chicken. Marjory Hendricks, owner of the farm, picked up the recipe at the Ishmala Restaurant at Mirror Lake in Wisconsin. Sounds like it should have come from Turkey.

A group of Class "C" restaurant permits have banded together to see if they can figure out how to give a shot in the arm to the cabaret business. They don't expect to have it measure up to war levels, but it could stand a little shot.

Police Protection Fees Still Unpaid

The wrangle over who pays for police protection at public events in private establishments got to the District Commissioners yesterday.

District License Superintendent C. T. Nottingham told the Commissioners that none of the six organizations billed for police services since July has paid up.

Nottingham asked the Commissioners what they wanted to do about the delinquents. The Commissioners have referred the matter to the corporation counsel, who is expected to advise the Commissioners and Nottingham not to "do" anything about the situation until the matter is settled in court.

Griffith Asks Injunction

Clark Griffith, one of six individuals or organizations so far billed for police and fire service during public events, has taken the matter to court with a suit asking an injunction to restrain the District government from collecting such fees.

Through his attorney, John E. Powell, Griffith asked that a three-judge tribunal be appointed to hear his plea that the law passed by Congress last June requiring the fee payments is unconstitutional.

The District corporation counsel's office expects to move in for a preliminary skirmish on the matter on Thursday, when Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch says a motion will be filed asking that Griffith's plea for a three-judge tribunal be denied. The motion, said Gasch, will be based on the premise that the act under which the fees are authorized is in the nature of a municipal ordinance.

Other Action Planned

The corporation counsel's office also will appear when arguments are heard on the injunction, Gasch said.

Yesterday, two other attorneys indicated they, too, planned to seek injunctions against the city's effort to collect the fees.

Charles E. Ford, representing Turner's Arena, said he might "hold off" for awhile before seeking an injunction. Frederic J. Ball, representing Uline's Arena, said he intended to file for an injunction "within a week."

So far, six organizations have been billed for police and fire protection. They are the Washington American League Baseball Club, for $8601; E st. Theater Corp., for $137; Loew's Capitol Theater, for $240; Turner's Arena, for $489; Migiel J. Uline, for $339; and the Howard Theater, for $70.

4 Charged With Abusing GI Prisoners

The Army announced yesterday that charges have been made against four officers in connection with alleged maltreatment of United States Army prisoners in Germany last winter.

It said that at the U. S. Army rehabilitation center at Wurzberg some inmates are alleged to have been imprisoned in an unheated cell in cold weather with the result that one prisoner's feet froze.

An investigation, the Army said, revealed that four officers "may have been guilty of acts of commission or omission in connection with the possible maltreatment."

Charges have been against the four and "a pretrial investigation, which is required by law, is being initiated."

If the investigation indicates "that a case exists against any or all of the officers" they will be brought to trial, the announcement said.

The Army said the charges have been preferred against the following:

Col. Harold H. McClune, retired, San Antonio, Tex., once commander of the rehabilitation center.

Lieut. Col. George E. Pinard, Wessington Springs, S. Dak., who was prison officer.

Capt. Samuel H. Wolford, RFD No. 1, Clear Springs, Md., who was commanding officer of the prisoners stockade.

Capt. Joel G. Holmes, jr., Carver Hall apartments, Philadelphia, who was prison surgeon.

Army officials said that if any trial is ordered, it presumably will

County Plans Cab Rate Plea

Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday voted to ask the Maryland Public Service Commission to fix county cab rates after holding public hearings.

The action capped a year-long controversy over the county's asserted right to regulate and license taxis.

Recently Montgomery County Circuit Court held the county taxi ordinance unconstitutional, and three Bethesda cab companies followed up the court ruling by jumping previously regulated fares of 30, 40 and 50 cents to 50, 60 and 70 cents.

Albert E. Conradis, county public utilities agent, who recommended the action yesterday, said all Maryland taxicabs are legally classified as common carriers and hence subject to regulations by the PSC.

At the same time, the utilities agent notified the commissioners that a proposed county-wide fire code has been drawn up and would be submitted in about a month.

In other business, the board approved a request from the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to underwrite two million dollars in bonds for water and sewer main construction.

Board members expressed resentment at a law which requires automatic approval of such requests. County Attorney F. Bernard Welsh, whose opinion was sought on the advisability of court test of the statute, said he did not believe the law unconstitutional.

Produce Man Says Union Man's Feud Nearly Broke Him

Philadelphia, Sept. 28 (AP).—A Dock st. produce merchant testified in United States District Court today his place of business was closed for two days because Harry (Turk) Daniels told him:

"I'm putting you out of business because I don't like you and there's not a thing you can do about it."

The witness, Jack Klein, said when he protested Daniels retorted: "The hell with you and the farmers. You're closed. Let the produce rot."

Daniels is former president of Local 929, AFL-Produce, Poultry, Fish and Oystermen Drivers and Helpers.

His testimony came at the trial of Daniels, two others and three organizations on charges of conspiracy to interfere with interstate commerce.

Fire Escape Contract Let

Contract for erection of a fire escape at the Prince Georges County Home at Ritchie, Md., at a cost of $797, was awarded yesterday to the Acme Iron Works Co. of Washington by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

Grand juries for several years have recommended that the fire escape be built, but wartime and postwar shortage of materials held up the project.

The commissioners also awarded a contract to Eugene Chaney of Upper Marlboro, Md., for hard surfacing the parking lot at the county courthouse in Upper Marlboro.

A delegation of 20 women representing the Homemakers Clubs of the county, headed by Mrs. Joseph Blandford of Brandywine, appeared before the commissioners to urge the authorization of an assistant to County Home Demonstration Agent Ethel M. Reagan and also that a full-time secretary be employed for the office.

The commissioners agreed to place $2000 in the next annual tax levy for this purpose, which would make the new posts available next July 1. Letters from the Marlboro Lions Club and the Beltsville Grange supporting the proposal also were read.

Indians Virtually Clinch Flag by Mauling Chisox, 11-0; Yankees, Bosox Lose, Drop Two Games Behind Leaders

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—You'd have to say this was one of baseball's finest hours, with Clark Griffith's seventh-place Nats ruthlessly slapping down his son-in-law's pennant-minded Red Sox today and emphasizing anew the honest charms of the game.

POVICH

At stake for the Washington Club was nothing of intrinsic importance—there's no seventh-place share of a World Series—but the integrity of the industry could have been somewhat on trial. The Nats are known to have definite preferences for the Red Sox as pennant winners against the Indians and Yankees, but the only prejudice on display today was an honest prejudice against the club they were playing.

And the Nats poured it on mercilessly, even more than the 4-2 score would indicate. Manager Joe Kuhel played it like the opening game of the season, with a pennant to be won by his athletes. There was nothing submissive about a club that recently lost 18 games in a row. They whupped the Red Sox good.

IF THE RED SOX were going to win this one, they'd have to beat Kuhel's best. The Nats weren't hauling in their horns. They started their only pitcher who could show better than a .500 average. Ray Scarborough had a 6-4 edge to show for his efforts against the Red Sox ever since he came into the majors. He was Kuhel's choice.

Sherry Robertson, brother-in-law of General Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox, gave Cronin no aid or comfort. In the first inning, Robertson banged an ordinary single to center and stretched it into a two-bagger with an ambitious piece of base running. Ed. Stewart ran out a tap to Bobby Doerr as if he was trying to stretch it into a triple.

When the Red Sox put two on base against Scarborough in the fourth inning, Kuhel had both Tom Ferrick and Lefty Thompson warming up. When Mickey Harris was pitching shutout ball against the Nats in the late innings, Kuhel benched the left-handed hitting Robertson for McBride, a right-hander. With the Nats in front 4-2, and a man on base, Kuhel pulled the left-handed Jake Early to move Al Evans in as a hitter.

AND THERE WAS plenty of grousing among Red Sox fans at the futile tactics of Manager Joe McCarthy. They know McCarthy as a cold guy, hard to panic, but they were suspecting him of carrying his ice-water technique too far today in going down the line with Pitcher Harris as a hitter on three different occasions.

McCarthy did, indeed, appear to be playing it as if the season were young yet; not in its crucial stage when any defeat this week might knock his ball club out of the pennant. With the score 4-0 against him, and the demand urgent that the Red Sox get some runs, McCarthy let Pitcher Harris hit with two men on base in the third inning.

That might have been countenanced by the more indulgent Red Sox fans, but the talk ran to revolt in the fourth inning with the Red Sox still four runs behind, and Pitcher Harris again hitting with two men on base. And in the seventh with Boston trailing, 4-2, and the situation even more desperate, McCarthy wouldn't pull Harris out for a hitter. He led off the inning and fouled out.

OFF TODAY'S performance, the Red Sox are a whipped gang as far as their World Series hopes are concerned, and they are playing like it. The suspicion is they've quit on themselves, which would make it unanimous because the Boston fans have also quit on them.

On an ideal day when the Red Sox might have tied for the pennant lead, only 10,485 showed up at Fenway Park.

It's a let-down for the Red Sox fans, and their present mood is understandable . . . The Red Sox let 'em down, with those nine defeats in their last 15 games. Ted Williams is being booed when he first pokes his nose out of the dugout, and today he made a low gesture of the nose-thumbing type that multiplied his hecklers

Boston has taken the Braves to its heart these days, despite the fact it is predominantly an American League town. The Braves are a colorless team; however, if the Red Sox somehow do manage to sneak into the pennant, it will be a ten-cent World Series, and worth every penny of it.

By Joe Reichler

Cleveland, Sept. 28 (AP).—Backing Gene Bearden's shutout pitching with a 13-hit attack, the Cleveland Indians walloped the Chicago White Sox, 11 to 0, tonight, to open up a two-game lead over Boston and New York and virtually clinch the American League pennant.

The victory, Cleveland's third straight and seventeenth in their last 20 games, gave the Tribe a strangle hold on the flag, since each of the three contenders has only four games remaining. The Red Sox and Yankees, deadlocked for second place, set the stage for the Indians' almost insurmountable lead by losing their afternoon games.

A three-run first inning off Lefty Bill Wight ignited by Leadoff Batter Dale Mitchells' 380-foot home run into the right field stands, sent the Indians off to a flying start. They picked up an unearned run in the second, a legitimate tally in the fourth, then burst the game wide open in the fifth with a six-run assault that chased Wight to the showers.

Clark Has Big Night

Allie Clark, who like Bearden came to the Indians from the Yankees, led the Tribe's attack on three Chicago pitchers with a home run and three singles in five trips to the plate. Clark drove in three runs and scored three times.

Thus the race plunges into the final five days of the season which ends Sunday. The Indians, at the moment, stand at 94 victories and 56 defeats. The Red Sox and Yankees own 92 triumphs and 58 losses.

A paid crowd of 60,405 which attended "Joe Earley night" in honor of the 34-year-old war veteran, selected as the one who best typifies the general Cleveland baseball fan, saw Bearden register his eighteenth victory against seven defeats, and his fifth in a row.

The tall, dark, and handsome native of Lexa, Ark., gave one of the best performance of his brief major league career. He allowed only four safeties, all singles, and was never in danger.

Only a Matter of Figures

Manager Lou Boudreau, who played a prominent part in the triumph with a pair of singles and two bases on balls in five times at bat, said after the game that only an extraordinary collapse on the part of the Indians would cost them the championship.

Before the game, when he learned that the Yankees and Red Sox had both been beaten, he said that if Cleveland should beat the White Sox tonight, the race would be all but mathematically over.

The Indians wasted no time in going to work on Wight. The White Sox's young lefthander, who had been beaten three straight times by Cleveland in previous encounters, not only dropped another to the Indians, but went down to his twentieth setback of the season. He has won only eight.

Mitchell sailed into Wight and lashed his homer into the seats for his fourth round tripper of the campaign. Before Wight got out of the woods, Boudreau, Gordon, Ken Keltner and Larry Doby had cracked consecutive singles for two more runs to give the Tribe a 3-0 edge. It was smooth sailing from then on.

Eleven Indians went to bat against Wight and his successor, Howard Judson, in the sixth. Eight reached base, four on singles and four on walks, with six of them scoring. Clark's two-run single off Judson was the big blow.

Bobby Feller with a record of 18-14, and an unfinished string of six wins in a row, will try for Cleveland's fourth in a row tomorrow afternoon. Lefty Frank Papish will hurl for the White Sox. The Indians have beaten the Sox 15 times in 21 meetings so far.

FIRST FLING—The ball (arrow), the first pitched by Boston's Joe Dobson in yesterday's game against the Nats in Beantown, sails toward Gil Coan, Nats' left fielder. Coan flied to Moses for the first out of the game. Dobson was knocked out of the box in the second inning when the Nats opened a five-hit barrage. Behind the plate is Catcher Birdie Tebbetts and Umpire Art Passarella. Nats beat the Red Sox, 4-2, and dealt Boston's pennant hopes a hard blow

Scarborough Dims Boston Hopes, 4-2, For His 14th

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, Sept. 28.—With the fury of the scorned, the lowly Nats whipped into the Red Sox today, beat 'em, 4-2, and crumpled anew the fading pennant hopes of the Boston club.

In a town already skeptical of the Red Sox attempt to make it an all-Boston world series, only 10,485 fans were in the stands for what might have been the crusher as the Sox fell two games behind the first-place Indians who beat the Chisox in a night game.

Ray Scarborough crimped the Red Sox slugging style with a canny six-hit pitching job to tack a fifth straight game to the current winning streak of the somewhat amazing Nats.

At the finish, grousing Red Sox fans were booing big Ted Williams, hitless all day and unable to whack a ball out of the infield against Scarborough.

The Nats, winners of only one previous game in eight attempts in Boston this season, made short shrift of Joe Dobson, the supposed ace of the Red Sox staff, who was entrusted with today's important job.

Dobson didn't last out the second inning, and before his exit the Nats had all of their runs, with a 4-0 lead.

If the Red Sox pennant fate does turn on today's defeat, then Scarborough must go down as the man who did them out of it, because he laid to with bat as well as arm to spread woe in Boston this afternoon.

Scarborough rapped the big blow of the Nats' four-run second inning—a single to left with the bases full that fetched two big runs across the plate.

That's all he had to work with, those four runs, because Mickey Harris moved in for Boston and shut the Nats out for the rest of the day, but Scarborough curveballed himself out of all serious threats.

Not the Red Sox, but the Nats, were performing today like a team

Hoyas Looking For Upset of Boston College

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Don't be too astounded if Georgetown springs an upset over highly-favored Boston College at Griffith Stadium Friday night.

There's a lot of latent talent on the Hoya squad. One of these games, the boys are liable to settle down and play some real honest-to-goodness football. When they do, they'll be a match for anybody.

The Hoyas' performance against a good Holy Cross team last week wasn't as bad as the 18-7 score would have you believe. If it hadn't been for two lamentable lapses on pass defense and a couple of offensive "boners," the game would have gone Georgetown's way.

Boston College opened with what sounds like an impressive 26-9 victory over Wake Forest but a suspicion prevailed after the game that the Eagles' strength wasn't as great as the Deacons' weakness.

Diminick Fine Runner

All four of the winners' touchdowns were set up by pass interceptions. And the interceptions weren't particularly spectacular. Wake Forest's Tom Fetzer, responsible for most of the mis-fires, was practically a twelfth man for B. C.

Before getting too optimistic for Georgetown, one thing's sure—there's nothing tainted about the performance of Boston College's fine running back, Joe Diminick. The 155-pounder, dwarfed by a mammoth line, piled up 92 yards from scrimmage for an 8-yard gain per try against Wake Forest. He took a pass for 22 more. Diminick, third-ranking runner in the East last year, looks better than ever.

But Georgetown has a few backs who seem to know what to do when they get the ball. Billy Conn, highly touted sophomore flash, gave a nice exhibition of how to fight for that extra yardage.

Others who looked good against Holy Cross included Babe Baranowski, Johnny Hughes, John O'Connor, Dick Barba, Bill Mitchell and Elmer Raba.

Alex MacLean, advance man for Boston College, mournfully checked in last night with the news that 10 of the Eagles were on the injured list. Principal loss at the moment is huge Center Ed Kennedy. Although he's 6-foot-6 and weighs 270 pounds, Kennedy suffered a concussion in the Wake Forest game and probably won't see action here.

A's Blast Raschi, Stun Yankees, 5-2

Philadelphia, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Carl Scheib, husky 21-year-old righthander from the Pennsylvania Dutch country, dealt the New York Yankees' pennant hopes a stunning blow today when he pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to a 5-2 victory.

Fortified by a nine-day rest, the Gratz, Pa., lad who was signed to an Athletic contract five years ago, pitched shutout ball for eight innings while the A's routed Vic Raschi in the third and then went on to win their only victory in three years from the Yankee mound ace.

The Athletics, who can't improve or lessen their current fourth place position, teed off with carefree nonchalance to defeat the man who bested them five times this season, once last year and twice at the fag end of 1946.

They showed their boldness in

Fitting Triumph

Scarborough and Bosox Have Had Gay Old Time All Season

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IT WAS NOTHING but right that Ray Scarborough should cap his best season in the majors yesterday with the victory that virtually killed Boston's pennant hopes.

Scarborough

Scarborough has been poison to the Red Sox all year and they were the same to the curve - balling righthander from Wake Forest, N. C.

Of his 14 triumphs, three of Scarborough's have been against Boston. The Bosockers are responsible for one of his eight defeats.

It's been touch and go between Ray and the Red Sox all year, with most of their battles being decided in the ninth inning, usually with two away.

IN BOSTON, on August 21, Scarborough was on the threshold of a splendid victory over the Sockers. He had restricted them to eight hits and was leading, 4-1, with two away in the ninth.

Then things started to happen, none of them good for Scarborough. A walk to Johnny Pesky and a double by Ted Williams set the stage for a Junior Stephens three-run homer which tied the score. Former Nat Stan Spence untied it in the tenth, leading off with a home run.

A week before, at Griffith Stadium, Scarborough owned a 5-1 lead going into the ninth. He had the Sox off balance all day with his sharp-breaking curve and they were swinging menac-

West's Fight Again Put Off Until Thursday

The off again, on again Sonny Boy West-Maxie Shapiro bout is off again until Thursday night.

Reason given by the Liberty Athletic Club sponsors is threatening weather. Just to make sure that weather won't interfere with this second postponement, the bout has been moved indoors to Uline Arena.

The match was originally docketed for last Monday at Griffith Stadium. It was pushed back to tonight because West suffered a cut lip during a sparring session.

Million Bid For Tribe Seats

Cleveland, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Buried under requests for more than a million tickets, the Cleveland Indians today closed down the sale of reserved seats for the World Series 10 hours after the first applications were accepted.

Tribe President Bill Veeck considered putting the lowly bleacher seats of Cleveland Stadium up for advance sale to help meet the demand, which could set a new World Series attendance record if the weatherman cooperates.

Veeck estimated that at least 80,000 persons and possibly 85,000 would be able to see each game which may be played here.

Veeck estimated that the letters which came in 40 bulging mail sacks today requested an aggregate of 1,029,000 seats. There are approximately 198,000 reserved tickets available for the three World Series games.

"He is their best hitter.

"He has hit many home runs."

The story of Williams is prominently displayed on the opening page of The Young America Junior Feader, recently adopted by the school department.

In spelling it's the same way. They're starting off with T-E-D. The kids can do that, all right, but a few of them are stumbling on the Williams part.

20,000 Ladies Get Orchids as Veeck Gives Night for 'Average Fan'

Cleveland, Sept. 28 (AP).—It all started as a gag, but tonight the joke came true. It was "Good Old Joe Earley Night" at the baseball game.

Joe Earley, a 24-year-old war veteran who lives in Lakewood, Ohio, wrote to a daily newspaper recently that with all the "nights" held for baseball figures, there ought to be a night for him.

Bill Veeck, president of the Indians, seized upon the idea as a way of honoring the average fan. So tonight was "Good Old Joe Earley" night.

The first 20,000 women fans to enter the stadium received orchids. They were flown from Hawaii.

Miss Request Gallops Home In $58,700 Belmont Race

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—They had to hand a 3-year-old filly the big money again today when Miss Request galloped to an easy victory in the $58,700 Ladies Handicap at Belmont Park.

For the tenth year in a row, a Miss from the sophomore ranks captured the mile and one-half test around Belmont's huge oval. The daughter of Requested upset eight rivals in the country's oldest race for fillies and mares.

With Jockey Ted Atkinson handling the reins perfectly, Miss Request took charge midway in the final bend, and moved off by herself down the stretch for a rousing four-length triumph over Galbrette. Honeymoon was third, by another length.

Miss Request, owned by Mrs. Ben F. Whitaker of the Texas Whitakers, ran the distance in the snappy time of 2:30 flat, and the few persons in a crowd of 18,654 who "got aboard" at the mutuels were rewarded with $17.00, $6.80 and $5.20 for $2. Mrs. Whitaker did even better, taking the winner's purse of $40,600.

Conniver, established the favorite at just under 6 to 5, never got into the race, and wound up fifth back of Harmonica.

GW's Davis 2d in Nation

The improved George Washington Colonials, already boasting as many victories (one) as they earned all last year, learned yesterday that their freshman fullback, Andy Davis, ranks second nationally in total yardage gained.

In two games, the 168-pound Washington, D. C., athlete has picked up 313 yards, 44 less than the leader, Joe Wendt of Texas Mines. Figures were released by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau, statistical arm of the N.C.A.A.

Davis ranks fourth among the passers with 12 completions in 19 attempts for one touchdown and a .632 percentage. Fifth among the passers is Navy's Reaves Baysinger, with 12 out of 21 for .571. Davis has gained 119 yards in 34 rushing attempts for a 3.5 average.

Tickets for the G.W.-V.M.I. game are on sale at Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H sts. nw., and at Griffith Stadium. Prices are $3.50 for boxes, $2.50 for grandstand seats and $1.50 for general admission.

Sprint Aces To Clash in Capitol 'Cap

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

With the chances of Calumet's Coaltown dimmed by his name appearing in the entries for the $25,000 Sysonby Mile at Belmont today, the Laurel race course, nevertheless, promises to have a representative field on hand for the $10,000 added Capital Handicap featuring Thursday's opening program.

Trainer Jimmy Jones, also entered Citation for the big New York pot so there is a possibility that Coaltown, the express-train son of Bull Lea, will be shipped in for the traditional 6-furlong sprint.

In addition to Coaltown, 46 horses have been nominated for the Capital and Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan expects upward of a dozen to vie, among them are such powerful sprinters as Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Big Story, winner of the Atlantic City Inaugural; H. G. Bedwell's Daily Dip, first home in the Myrtlewood; Brookfield Farm's Isa, victor in the Mermaid; Grandview Stable's Erigeron, successful in the Rumson, Greentree's Coincidence, winner of the Bay Shore; S. W. Labrot's Repand, first in the Rowe Memorial; Lazy F Ranch's Nathaniel who took Pimlico's Jennings; Myron Newmeyer's Turbine, top horse in the Narragansett Spring Handicap; Sandy Strand's Manna H, who won the Pawtucket; Shamrock's Little Harp, victor in the Baltimore Spring Handicap and Sanford Stud's Yankee Hill, first in the Oceanport.

Air Patrol Eligible

Other nominees who figure to be contenders include Shamrock's Air Patrol, second in the stake last season when Sea Snack was the winner; Alfred Vanderbilt's Newsweekly, C. V. Whitney's Dinner Gong, Greentree's Blue Border; Joe W. Brown's Brown Mogul and S. Greenfield's High Trend. The last named was a top performer at Laurel a year ago, finishing second in the Laurel mile and getting third honors in both the Capital and Maryland Handicaps.

Rough Time and New Moon are co-holders of the Capital time record of 1.11 but with an entire new racing strip available, it is possible this mark may be endangered in this year's renewal.

Giants, Phillies Divide

Home Run Double Win 2d for Phils

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—A three-run homer by Puddinhead Jones and a three-run double by Gran Hamner sparked a six-run sixth inning rally that enabled the Philadelphia Phillies to beat the New York Giants, 6-3 today in the second game of a double-header.

The game was called at the end of six innings because of darkness. The Giants took the opener, 6-5.

The Phillies rallied for five runs in the ninth inning of the opener, but it wasn't enough.

ingly, but with futility against his hopped-up fast ball.

HE STRUCK OUT Williams twice and forced him to ground out twice also, but once again Scarborough's ninth-inning Red Sox jinx prevailed. DiMaggio doubled and Pesky beat out an infield hit to usher him off the mound.

Forest Thompson saved the victory for him, but it was mighty close.

Williams greeted Thompson with a three-run homer and it appeared that Ray's efforts would be in vain, but Thompson got Stephens on a pop-up to end the game.

THERE WAS one game this year, however, between Scarborough and the Sox in which the ninth inning voodoo worked against Boston.

It happened on July 7 in Boston. The Bosox entered the ninth with a 6-2 lead, scored against Scarborough, who had been chased in the seventh.

The aroused Nats made an amazing comeback, scoring five runs in the ninth with two away to win the game and save Scarborough from defeat.

Of his 14 victories this year, Scarborough naturally received the biggest thrill out of yesterday's.

"I've never felt more confident," he said. "When Doerr hit that homer it didn't bother me too much. I knew I had my stuff. And when Spence walked in the ninth with two away I wasn't worried because I thought two of those pitches to Stan were strikes."

Williams Bats .235 Against Scarborough

Ted Williams, poison to most American League pitchers, is a soft touch for the Nats' Ray Scarborough.

Against Scarborough in the last four games between Washington and Boston, Williams has made only four hits in 17 tries for a puny .235 average.

Scarborough has also fanned the league's leading batter five times.

Catholic Highs Form League

Plans are under way for the formation of a six-team Catholic High School basketball and baseball league to begin operation with the 1948-49 basketball season.

St. John's, Gonzaga, Georgetown Prep, St. Anthony's and Priory of Washington, and DeMatha of Hyattsville are the schools which will be represented.

A meeting to draw up a constitution and schedule will be held within the next two weeks. Jim O'Donnell, basketball coach at DeMatha is acting as chairman of the league.

The six schools are setting aside Friday dates on their basketball schedules to be filled in with league games.

St. John's Basketball Coach Joe Gallagher said last night that he will propose that non-Catholic schools like Devitt and Woodward, with similar eligibility standards, also be invited to participate.

Sanford Stops Tigers, 5-3

Detroit, Sept. 28 (AP).—Hank Arft's eighth inning home run, the thirty-second this season off Freddie Hutchinson, cracked a 3-all tie today to give the St. Louis Browns a 5 to 3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

with pennant notions. They came up with the dashing plays, scrambled around the bases, played it to the hilt in contrast to the errant Red Sox who were submissive in the late innings.

Rookie Bill Goodman, Boston first baseman, contributed a grievious wild throw to the Washington four-run uprising in the second inning, launched by Mickey Vernon's two-bagger into right field. On a walk to Yost and the first of Mark Christman's three straight singles, the Nats filled the bases against Dobson with none out.

Goodman made a clever pick-up of Jake Early's smash over first base but his throw to home for a force play on Vernon was a wild heave over Tebbetts' head, Vernon scoring.

Scarborough lashed a single to left and two more runs scored. Al Kozar singled off Stephens' glove, and the Nats had their 4-0 lead.

Scarborough made those four runs stand up nicely. He didn't permit the Red Sox their second hit until Stephens opened the fourth with a single to center. Stewart bobbled the ball and Stephens raced to second. Doerr singled to left and Stephens moved to third, whence he scored on Moses' force-play grounder.

And then in the sixth inning Bobby Doerr whacked his twenty-sixth homer of the year over the left field wall with none out and the bases empty.

The Red Sox didn't get another man to second base, and their only consolation of the day was the scoreboard news of the Yankees' defeat at Philadelphia.

Capitol Ladies' League Opens Bowling Season

The reorganized Capitol Ladies' Major League, formerly known as the Ladies' Major District League, will swing into action tonight with four matches.

The defending champions, King Pin, captained by Ruth King, will play host to Brookland. Lorraine Gulli's Hi-Skor quintet visits Hyattsville; Rosslyn plays at Ice Palace and Takoma at Fort Davis. Three new franchises were taken over by Takoma, Fort Davis and Hyattsville.

the first when Eddie Joost tripled, Barney McCosky singled and Ferris Fain doubled in succession. That Raschi escaped with only one run charged against him came when Yankee Manager Bucky Harris wisely ordered Elmer Valo walked and Sam Chapman hit into a double play.

But Raschi couldn't get by the third when the top of the A's batting order scuffed him for two more runs before a man was retired. McCosky singled, Fain tripled high off the right field wall and Majeski singled through the box.

That ended Raschi. Joe Page came in and was touched for another run after Valo forced Majeski on a bunt. Valo stole second and rode home when Chapman doubled off the left field wall. Eddie Joost's walk, a sacrifice, his steal of third and Majeski's single gave the A's their final run in the fourth.

DiMaggio Fails

Scheib, meanwhile buoyed by excellent control went along swimmingly. His closest call was in the third when the Yanks filled the bases with two out. But in this clutch, Joe DiMaggio hit a three-nothing pitch into a force play.

The Yanks finally broke through to score in the ninth. Johnny Lindell singled and Sherman Lollar walked. After Hank Bauer ran for Lollar, Rookie Joe Collins, just up from Newark, put a pinch double along the right field foul line, scoring two. Bill Johnson skied out, and Phil Rizzuto was thrown out. Valo made a brilliant running knee-high backhand catch of Tomy Henrich's line drive to end the game.

Confession Taken

Girl Drowned By Ex-Fiance, Police Say

Cumberland, R. I., Sept. 28 (U.P.). The attractive daughter of a State representative was drowned today and police said her jobless sweetheart confessed holding her head under water because she broke their engagement.

The girl was Miss Mary Burns, 26, a typist and daughter of State Representative Edward Burns. Her body was recovered from Boulter Pond after Francis Kelley, 22, went to a nearby house and said:

"I am in great trouble. My girl is in the pond."

Police Chief William J. Boyle said Kelley confessed slaying her after five hours of questioning.

He said he and Miss Burns had been keeping company for two years, but Representative Burns objected to the match and his daughter returned Kelley's ring.

The couple made a date for last night, however, and went to a movie, later going to the pond to talk over their problems.

The youth tried to induce her to change her mind, but she wouldn't. Then, at dawn, Kelley pushed her into the water, police said, and held her under "until she didn't move anymore." He was booked on a murder charge.

pears about then; diabetes is known to be less severe, and cancer progresses more slowly."

Perhaps the greatest disturber of old age, said Dr. Johnson, is enforced retirement from work at a stated age.

"The psychic trauma, affront to the mind, of being forced to retire while still in full possession of one's mental faculties is often responsible for hastening greatly the aging process," he said.

To prepare for this, he advised those approaching retirement age to widen their horizons, seek new outside interests, and taper off to this retirement with "afternoons off, frequent weekend vacations, and longer annual vacations."

"The individual who prepares in advance for his retirement by cultivating interests and friendships outside his work will do much to make his latter years more pleasant," he advised.

Dr. Johnson recommended "recreation rather than exercise" as a formula for keeping physically fit and happy "in the second 40 years." He added, however, that he was not against exercise "within reason," but said that like many other things it "can be overdone."

To illustrate his point against exercise, he told how Walter Camp, famous Yale athlete, boasted of keeping members of President Wilson's war Cabinet in prime condition with "daily dozen" exercise.

"The only Cabinet member who refused was Josephus Daniels, who recently died just short of his 86th birthday," said Dr. Johnson. "He outlived all other members of the Cabinet, and was active and useful until his last illness. Camp died at 67."

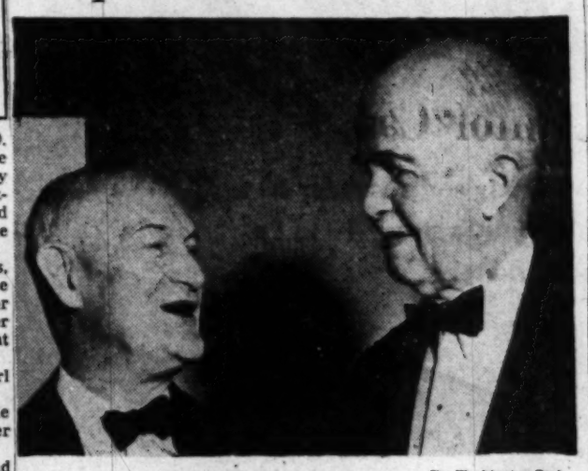
Concluding, in perhaps his only suspiciously wistful vein, he declared:

"Life after 50 may not be so exciting, but it can be fun."

Tito Attends Parliament

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Sept. 28 (AP).—Marshal Tito went to the National Parliament today. He looked healthy and well tanned from a vacation on the Dalmatian Coast. Deputies and members of the cabinet applauded when he walked into the chamber.

Arthritis Seen Hazard Of Sports and Manual Labor



The Washington Post

Dr. Arthur C. Christie (left) and Dr. Joseph S. Wall were cited last night by the District Medical Society

Arthritis, in most all its forms, may well be an occupational hazard of sports and manual labor, Dr. Russell L. Cecil, medical authority, told physicians in assembly here yesterday.

He blamed the start of many arthritis conditions of later life to injury piled on injury, "repeated minor insults to the joints" during early life rigors of sports and work.

Dr. Cecil, whose compilation of "Medicine by American Authors" is a textbook in many medical schools, spoke before an afternoon session of the nineteenth annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society, which ends today. He is professor of clinical medicine at Cornell University Medical College and past president of the American Rheumatism Association.

Psychiatrist Hits Extremists

Also at the assembly yesterday, psychiatrists who "practice at the extremes" were taken to task by Dr. C. Charles Burlingame, president and psychiatrist-in-chief of The Institute of Living, at Hartford, Conn. He particularly attacked proponents of what he termed "sex-is-everything" and "love-starvation" schools.

Dr. Burlingame also reiterated his recently publicized advice that psychiatrists stick as much as possible to human healing and leave the world problems to sociologists and others.

On his subject, chronic arthritis and its relation to trauma (injury), Dr. Cecil said physicians have been too prone to take a short-sighted view of the problems. By delving into the youth histories of their patients, he said, they can better find future relief for their clients.

Football Plays Affected

In his own studies, he said, he found that former football players and ditchdiggers came to him as victims of osteoarthritis of the hips; that golfers, tennis players and mountain climbers showed up later as victims of arthritis of foot joints, and that skeet shooters appeared with shoulder bursitis.

By studying early histories of their arthritic patients, Dr. Cecil said, physicians can better advise them of what movements to avoid, what therapy will offer most relief. For most patients, he said, he found rest and heat treatments the most beneficial.

Dr. Burlingame, stressing the need of a "housecleaning" in psychiatry, admitted that the science "by its very nature is easy prey for charlatanry, and intermingling in the public mind with metaphysics and cultism."

True psychiatry, he said, is nothing more than "the medical specialty devoted to emotional disorders." But by its terminology "peculiar to the field," he said, medical men have come to look on psychiatry as something "foreign to medicine."

"In psychiatry," declared Dr. Burlingame, "there is a demand for a housecleaning and a hard-headed differentiation between hypothesis and scientific fact. I decry certain present-day trends, not the least of which is the close identification between psychiatry and sex."

Rather than interpret sex as "including everything from spending a connubial night to leaning on a hitching post," he said, psychiatrists should accept the definition that "only a part of man is his creative urge, and only a part of that creative urge is his procreative urge."

Another psychiatrist, Dr. O. Spurgeon English, professor of psychiatry at Temple University, Philadelphia, told the physicians that one of the biggest obstacles to treatment a psychiatrist must overcome is the average person's "shame" to admit a mental weakness.

Getting Less "Shameful"

They may even "point with pride" to their weak stomach or weak heart, he said, but "practically no one wants to be regarded as having any weakness in the mind or anything less than perfect mental health."

The attitude is slowly changing, however, he said. He praised newspapers and other information media for "preparing the public to think about themselves as having personality inadequacies which could make trouble for themselves in the realm of health."

For last night's program, the physicians assembled in annual banquet of the District Medical Society, in the Presidential Room of the Hotel Statler. Certificates for meritorious service to the medical profession and the community were awarded to Drs. Arthur C. Christie and Joseph S. Wall, by the society.

Was Army Chief of Radiology

Dr. Christie, 68, son of a Pennsylvania physician, is noted chiefly for his work with X-rays. During World War I he served as chief of radiology in the Army. Later he was professor of radiology at George Washington University and profesor of clinical radiology at Georgetown University School of Medicine.

He is the surviving member of the firm of Groover, Christie & Merritt, at 1835 I st. new.

Dr. Wall, 71, is known for his work in pediatrics. He is chairman of the medical staff at Children's Hospital and has been a resident physician there for more than 50 years.

In 1947 he was awarded the Carlos J. Finlay Medal for his services in advancing intercontinental pediatrics. Dr. Wall lives at 3312 35th st. nw., and has offices at 1801 K st. nw.

Civil Service Post Reported Offered to 2 Personnel Experts

(Editor's note: The series on President Truman's record in dealing with the 2,200,000 Federal workers will be resumed here tomorrow.)

CIVIL SERVICE: Another person has been talked to about the GOP vacancy on the Civil Service Commission. He's James Mitchell, the 40-year-old director of the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada and a former Federal worker.

Mitchell was called to the White House from Chicago several days ago. It's reported that he was asked if he would accept the position if the President offered it to him. Mitchell is said to have requested a few days to think it over.

During the war years Mitchell was a Coast Guard commander and was the director of its civilian personnel operations. Previously he had been in personnel work in half a dozen Federal agencies.

Dr. Frederick Davenport, chairman of the Federal Personnel Council, also has been sounded out on the commission vacancy. In fact, it's reliably reported that a flat offer was made to him. However, it would be no surprise to see Davenport support Mitchell for the post.

STORY: This delightful story was told several days ago at the Oklahoma City convention of the National Association of Employes of Collectors of Internal Revenue:

It seems that a taxpayer with the name of O'Donnell went into a Revenue office to make out his income tax return. He was assigned to another Irishman by the name of O'Shea, a deputy collector, who was to help him figure out his return.

During the discussion over the return, O'Donnell said he was entitled to a deduction of $150 which he had contributed to a church. This exchange then took place:

"What church?" asked O'Shea.

"The Baptist Church," O'Donnell replied.

Said O'Shea sternly: "You're a helluva O'Donnell."

NEW DEPARTMENT: The Hoover Commission has a preliminary report which recommends the creation of a new cabinet department, a department of public works. The report is said to have been made by Robert Moses of New York, the park commissioner and city planner. Moses was in charge of a "task force" that examined the Government's public works activities.

The Moses report, it's rumored, proposes that the new department take over most of the functions of the Federal Works Agency, the civilian functions of the Army's Corps of Engineers, Interior's Bureau of Reclamation, the authority to plan and to construct post offices, and most other Federal buildings.

The report of the Hoover Commission on Government Reorganization won't be made until early January. The committee chairman, former President Herbert Hoover, is already on record for the creation of additional departments. It's reasonable to assume that the Moses suggestions will get serious study.

PER DIEMS: After considering for two years the Civil Service Commission has finally decided that the 3000 or so substitute printers will have their jobs dropped from the salary-fixing Classification Act.

This means that the salaries of these workers will be fixed hereafter by local wage boards, like those of other per diem employes. It's possible that an inter-agency board will be created here to set the salaries for all agencies employing substitute printers. The Typographical Union, which organized the substitute printers in the Federal service, through its affiliate, Substitute Printing Union No. 1, petitioned Civil Servce about two years ago to take the jobs from under the Classfication law.

LOYALTY: This is the latest loyalty rumor—that only a handful of the Federal workers who were suspended on orders of Justice officials will be indicted. A top Administration source guessed it would be "less than half a dozen." However, he conceded that several additional former employes who resigned under fire of loyalty charges may also be indicted.

Criminal action against one or more employes in the Postoffice and Navy departments and the housing and Federal Security agencies is reported to be under study. The Justice Department is expected to ask grand juries to indict a group of present and former employes on charges of either fraud or perjury in concealing membership in the Communist party.

As revealed here previously, the Justice officials appeared most anxious to get the indictments before the election—apparently an effort to take the Communists-in-Government issue away from the Republicans. Also, the first list of people who were slated to be indicted carried the names of some employes who had been cleared on the basis of evidence supplied by the department.

Apparently the Justice officials have taken another good look at the list and have decided they can't make good cases against some of the people they were so excited about and ordered the agency heads to suspend about two weeks ago. Incidentally, employes who are suspended and are later cleared must be paid for their lost time u

ABW to Hike School Fare In Arlington

Rise Will Be 2½c; Board Turns Over Subsidy Problem To Superintendent

Arlington school children on 18 special school bus routes operated by the A. B. & W. Transit Co. will have to pay 2½ cents more for their bus fares beginning early in October unless the Arlington School Board covers the boost with a special subsidy.

This dilemma was tossed into the school board's lap last night by Lester Conley of the Arlington public utilities commission who had discussed the matter with the A. B. & W. Co.

The line, which provides 18 special busses for A ton school chi en recently was authorized to increase all school fares from 5 to 7½ cents by the State Corporation Commission effective about October 1.

Regular Fares Unchanged

However, Conley said, the bus company had ag d to continue its present 5-cent rate for school children riding regular bus routes to and from classes. But the company said it would need to charge the 7½ cents fare on the special route.

Conley pointed out that the W. V. & M. Coach Co., formerly the Arnold line, operates 44 special school buses and has not as yet requested an increase from the 5-cent fare.

But, he said, if the A. B. & W. gets the increase it would be probably be necessary to give the same boost to the W. V. & M. It would cost the school board $60,000 annually to subsidize both bus companies for the increase, Conley said.

Beyond Board's Means

The school board chairman, Barnard Joy, said the sum was "beyond the means of the board" and referred the entire problem to School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp.

However, the board agreed to continue paying its present 5-cent subsidy on each fare of fifth and sixth grade children between the Glencarlyn section and the Matthew Maury School.

Columbia Pike Group Indorses Bond Plan

The Columbia Pike Citizens Association last night unanimously indorsed Arlington County's proposed $4,750,000 school bond issue, scheduled for a referendum this November.

In its meeting at Patrick Henry School in Arlington the association heard the bond issue defended by Riggs McCormick of the Citizens Committee for School Improvement.

Five-minute talks by candidates for the County Board were followed by a question-and-answer period. Speakers included Alfred Frisbie, incumbent; Jacob Bechtel, Dr. Francis Clair and Lee Potter.

The Citizens association reiterated its opposition to a proposed change from November to May, 1949, of election of officers to the Arlington School Board.

Montgomery Seal Goal Set at $35,000

A goal of $35,000 has been set for this year's Christmas seal campaign by the Montgomery County Tuberculosis Association, following a study of 1949 projects by the campaign mapping committee of the organization. Dr. Norman C. Shoemaker, county seal sale chairman, said yesterday.

Other members of the mapping committee, besides Shoemaker, include Malcolm Scates, vice chairman, John C. Metcalfe, Forte Sandison and George V. Menke.

Operation of Chest Units Viewed on Tour By Group of Volunteer Workers for Drive

"To develop love for the beautifull and the good, to banish selfishness through the spirit of brotherly kindness . . ."

A small group of Washingtonians, from all walks of life, saw those words come alive yesterday in a cozy colonial-type dwelling at 619 D st. se., known as Friendship House Day Home.

Little girls and boys of 6 and 7 sat on stools in the sunshine and daubed colorful designs on bright pieces of paper. There were smiles and gay chatter.

A boy of 11 swung his foot hard at a ball, and felt better for it. A blond child gathered pebbles and offered them to the visitors for "good luck."

Mrs. Gladys Kraft, activities director, explained to the guests—on a tour sponsored by the Community Chest to show what Red Feather dollars accomplish—how Friendship House operates. She emphasized that most of the children present were those of working mothers, mothers with whom it is a question of having to work, rather than wanting to work.

Earlier, the delegation, made up of some 30 volunteer solicitors employed both in Government and industry, toured the Salvation Army's Emergency Home for Women and Children, and the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene. The Chest campaign for $4,566,790 in the District area opens October 7.

Attaches of the Salvation Army hostel explained how the agency cares for many people who have nowhere else to go. Many, the visitors were told, are unmarried mothers and stranded wives and children.

At the mental hygiene quarters, the guests learned about some therapy techniques employed by psychologists with misbehaving youngsters—and often their parents, too. The visitors passed through a child therapy room and saw dolls with which children play, that their play habits are being analyzed. The children reveal many secrets, such as their status in the family, whether they like their older brothers, how their parents get along.

Interviewed at the close of their excursion, here's what several Washingtonians had to say:

Miss Marguerite Walker of 2410 20th st., nw., a secretary for the Board of Trade—"I think the Community Chest has done an exceptionally good job."

Mrs. Edith Wood of Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, a Bureau of Engraving employe—"I liked what I saw very much; now I know I'm working for a good cause."

Mrs. Wood said she had been doing volunteer work in Chest drives for 20 years.

Joseph Hurley of 812 Jefferson st. nw., a Washington businessman—"I've just been in Washington for a short time and I've wondered why the Community Chest has flopped in the past. I can't find the reason here. These agencies are doing a good job."

Later it was announced that top flight labor and business leaders will join forces Thursday in behalf of 1200 Red Feather campaigns for the needy all over the country.

AFL President William Green and CIO President Philip Murray will meet with Henry Ford 2d, president of Community Chests of America, and H. J. Heinz, former president, to mark the opening of Red Feather drives across the Nation.

Two more names were added yesterday to the roll of area traffic fatalities, with the deaths of a painter, hit by a trolley car, and an Andrews Air Force Base airman, injured in a jeep accident.

Lawrence G. Miller, 45, of 1230 H st. ne., a painter and former District policeman, died at Gallinger Hospital at 7 a. m., shortly after he was hit by a trolley car at 9th and K sts. nw. Brady was held on a technical charge for the coroner, then released in custody of Capital Transit officials.

mother, Mrs. Beatrice Miller, Enid, Okla.; a brother, Claude B. Miller, of the H street address; a former wife, Mrs. Marie Breland, Annapolis, and two sons, Lawrence, jr., and Donald, 18, Annapolis.

Bolling Air Force Base Hospital reported Pfc. Neal Duane Seaman, 22, of Joplin, Mo., died there yesterday morning of a skull fracture suffered Saturday when a jeep he was driving overturned just off a taxiway at Andrews Air Force Base. Of three others injured with him, S/Sergt. Anthony C. Smith, 36, of 5038 17th st. nw., was still in serious condition at Bolling hospital last night with a compound fracture of the nose, cuts and bruises.

In another accident here, Thomas H. Windsor, 50, of 4559 MacArthur blvd. nw., was admitted to Casualty Hospital in undetermined condition after being struck by a car driven by Dr. Thomas Madden Foley, 70, of McLean, Va. Police said Windsor stepped from a streetcar loading platform in the 3100 block of M st. nw.

Warren Allen, 15, of Queens Chapel rd., Hyattsville, was taken to Washington Sanitarium, after the bicycle on which he was riding was struck by a Capital Transit bus at Old Bladensburg rd. and Franklin ave. in Silver Spring. The boy was reported suffering possible skull fracture, police said.

Court to Rule On Brass Rail Acquittal Plea

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Federal Judge Henry Schweinhaut today will rule on defense motions for a directed verdict of acquittal in behalf of Charles N. Nelson, night manager of the Brass Rail Restaurant, and Henry M. (Piggy) Leake, accused of shooting each other at the cafe last January 8.

The jurist took the motions under advisement yesterday after hearing pleas from Defense Attorneys Bernard Margolius, Ray Jenkins and Curtis Mitchell that the Government's case was unproved and that the testimony of prosecution witnesses was contradictory.

Jibes At Police Evidence

Tilting at police testimony in particular, Margolius said: "Never in my experience with police investigation has there been such a display of inconsistency and incompetence . . . to make a jury laugh at the testimony of a police officer."

Margolius then cited the testimony of Pvt. Peter M. Zazanis that Nelson told him he was being held up when the gunplay occurred; that Nelson told him he got a gun from a safe before he was shot; and that Nelson told him Nelson's antagonist was a friend of Roger W. Simkins, whose wife owns the restaurant.

The lawyer then recited the testimony of Pvt. James Beach, who arrived at the scene with Zazanis, that Nelson said he didn't know who shot him and that he (Nelson) got a gun after he was shot.

"The whole case has been permeated with a gambling aspect," Margolius complained declaring that would be likely to prejudice the jurors.

Charge Thrown Back

Schweinhaut observed that the gambling aspect was brought in "originally by you" and cited the questioning of prospective jurors during which Margolius inquired if they had ever heard of certain prominent Washington gamblers.

Mitchell contended that the Government's case rested solely on circumstantial evidence and pointed out that one Government witness, Willie Granger, Brass Rail cashier, had told a different story to the grand jury from the one she told in court.

Prosecutor Charles B. Murray said he would rest his case today after calling Odessa Madre, former numbers bookie. Miss Madre was reported too ill to testify yesterday.

Trio Arrested In Brentwood Lottery Raid

Three men were arrested yesterday in a raid by Prince Georges County police on an alleged bookmaking establishment at 3801 39th ave., Brentwood, Md.

Those arrested were Milton Belzer, 35, and Albert Tavan, 40, both of 1424 N st. nw., both charged with operating a lottery and bookmaking. They were released on $1000 bond on each charge for a hearing October 7, at Hyattsville Police Court.

Also arrested was William C. Dunn, owner of the house, who was charged with permitting the operation of a lottery and permitting bookmaking and released on $1000 bond on each charge for a hearing on the same date.

In the raiding party were Detectives Richard A. Pearson and Earl Huber, Sergt. E. R. Thompson, Pvt. Emmett Gray, all of the county police, and Chief of Police Carl Schatz of Brentwood.

The establishment had been under surveillance for several weeks. Confiscated from the second floor quarters were a ticker, three telephones, an adding machine, scratch sheets, racing bet slips, numbers charts and other paraphernalia, police said.

The raid is the first in several weeks but is in continuation of the announced policy of Police Chief Ralph W. Brown to keep gambling establishments closed in the county.

Numbers Slips, Tip Sheets Taken Here

Horse-race betting sheets, numbers lottery slips and other gambling paraphernalia, and $458 in cash were seized by police vice squad raiders, they said, in a raid at 3:15 p. m. yesterday on a second-floor apartment at 940 New York ave. nw.

Paul Aronstein, 46, who opened the door for the raiders after they had watched the place for three days, was booked on charges of setting up a gaming table, operating a lottery and possessing lottery slips. After being fingerprinted, he was released under $3500 bond for appearance in Municipal Court this morning.

Waitress Stabbed In Ladies' Room; Man Is Held

At Emergency Hospital, the woman was identified as Elizabeth Pocock, 1443 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Police said the stabbing took place at the Sandbar Restaurant, 1123 14th st. nw., after a quarrel developed between the woman and George Robert Hurley, 34, of 1500 Quarles st. ne., an unemployed truck driver.

Hurley, who was charged at Second Precinct station with assault with a dangerous weapon, chased the woman into the rest room and stabbed her in the abdomen, Police Pvts. Chester H. Harman and Pvt. William L. Van Nuis reported.

Mrs. Pocock was employed as a waitress at Benny's Tavern, 829 14th st. nw., about three blocks from the scene of the stabbing, police said.

Three new polio cases were reported in Greater Washington yesterday bringing the year's total to 176, compared to 35 cases at this date last year.

The new cases were a 28-year-old man of the 6200 block of 30th st. nw., who entered Mount Alto Hospital Monday; a 30-year-old man from Redick dr., Silver Spring, who entered the hospital the same day, and a 6-year-old girl from the 3900 block of Burns st. se., who entered Children's Hospital Monday.

'Kidnaping' Still Mystery, Police Say

Alexandria Police Inspector Russell A. Hawes said last night the reported kidnaping on an Alexandria street Sunday night of a Veterans Administration lawyer and his wife was still a mystery to him.

Hawes said the attorney, Don Gray, 47, of 1227 S. Taylor st., Arlington, had declined an invitation by Detective Paul Smith to come to headquarters to discuss the case. Hawes said he was informed Gray and his wife apparently had moved from their apartment and that Gray had not reported for work yesterday at his office in the Veterans Administration.

At Gray's apartment telephone exchange, it was said his telephone extension had been blocked out. Gray's neighbors said they saw no furniture moved from the Gray apartment.

Inspector Hawes said his main interest in the case was in Gray's charge that the two men Mr. and Mrs. Gray said abducted them Sunday night posed as Alexandria detectives looking for the slayers of Alexandria Police Pvt. Robert Harris. Harris was shot while making a routine check of a restaurant on his beat recently.

Hyattsville Parking Meter Hearing Set

A hearing on a motion to dismiss the temporary injunction against installation of parking meters in Hyattsville is scheduled for 10:30 a. m. today in Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

Nicholas Orem, jr., attorney for the City of Hyattsville, has filed a demurrer and motion to dissolve the injunction granted by Judge Charles C. Marbury September 17 to Ralph Dudrew and other Hyattsville businessmen.

Orem points out in his demurrer that the city will not be financially liable for anything in the meter installation except to pay 50 per cent of the collections to the Mi-Co Meter Co. until the purchase price of $11,700 is paid. At the end of a nine-month trial period, the council may order the meters removed without incurring any liability, Orem points out.

J. Edwin Hutchinson and Hervey G. Machen are attorneys for the businessmen.

Fire Prevention Posters Win Awards for Three Students

Winners in a contest among art students in Washington high schools for an official poster for Fire Prevention Week, October 3 to 9, were announced yesterday by Harry J. Miller, chairman of the Fire Prevention Council of the District.

First prize, a $25 war bond, was awarded to Barbara Gorsky, 17, of 453 Oakwood st. se., a junior at Anacostia High School. Second prize, a silver loving cup, went to Robert Ellertson, 18, of 612 C st. ne., a senior at Eastern High School. James A. Russell, a student at Coolidge High School won a certificate of honorable mention. Formal presentation of the awards will be made next week.

Earlier in the day the Fire Prevention Council met to draft final plans for activities during Fire Prevention Week. Climaxing the events will be a 90-minute parade October 9, led by Fire Chief Clement Murphy and displaying the finest in District fire fighting apparatus.

More than 400 men representing the District department will march in the parade with bands and fire units from nearby communities.

Officials of the council said radio and television programs have been planned throughout the week accenting fire prevention. On Sunday fire apparatus will be on display at Griffith Stadium and a dummy fire alarm box will be placed at the corner of 7th and F sts. nw., throughout the week with two firemen there to explain how an alarm should be turned in and how the system operates.

6 Fined for Staying In Condemned Balls Ct. Buildings

Six persons were fined $10 each yesterday for lodging their families in condemned buildings at 921-929 Balls ct. nw.

The defendants, whose families total about 30 persons, were ordered to move in July, but, according to Judge Ellen K. Raedy in Municipal Court, have apparently made no effort to obtain housing elsewhere.

Charles O'Connell, building inspector, said he will press additional charges against the defendants if they persist in living in the condemned buildings which he said have rotten flooring, crumbling masonry and no indoor water facilities.

The defendants are Louis Miller, Dewitt Hawkins, Ida Jackson, Josh Burton, Julia Jones and Beula Green, all of the Balls ct. residences.

The convict was identified by prison authorities as Willie Lee Johnson, 25, who, they said, has 3 years and 10 months still to serve on a forgery conviction.

The prisoner, officials said, told them he was headed for the home of a sister in Washington.

'Abductor' Takes Officer to Station

For 10 minutes yesterday, Metropolitan Police though they had a kidnaping on their hands—an abduction of one of their own policemen.

Then, as "Special Attention Lookouts" were crackling over police radios to scout cars, motorcycles, cruisers and whatnot, the policeman, who an unidentified citizen had reported as 'kidnaped' by a truck driver, entered the Second Precinct Station with his truck-driver prisoner.

It started at 13th and K sts. nw. about 11 a. m. First Precinct Pvt. Norman S. Jones, off duty and in civvies, said he was walking across a crosswalk when a truck bumped into him. When he remonstrated with the driver, James S. Harrod, 48, of 752 Howard rd. st., the policeman said Harrod made disparaging remarks. Jones said he then drew out his police badge and told Harrod he was under arrest.

Rather than summon a patrol, he offered to let Harrod drive to the Second Precinct Station, 6th and K sts. nw. As Jones climbed into the truck beside Harrod, a passerby who had heard only part of the exchange of words thought Jones, whom he knew as a policeman, was being forcibly abducted and telephoned his suspicion to police.

Harrod was charged with disorderly conduct.

Two Held in Burglaries

A 39-year-old man and a woman said to be his accomplice were charged yesterday in connection with a series of eight burglaries in Southwest Washington.

According to police, the woman admitted knocking on front doors to determine if the occupants were in. If there was no answer, she sent Morris to the rear to break in, it was said.

Property including clothing and radios was recovered from pawn shops, police said.

'Lady Gob' Afoul of Law

An Arlington former Navy man and his former Wave wife were arrested at the Dumbarton Theater, Wisconsin near Dumbarton aves., at 9:30 last night because both of them were dressed in Navy enlisted men's uniforms.

The "Mom and Dad" film being shown there is restricted to all-male audiences at one time and all-female at another. The audience was supposed to be all-male last night until a house nurse discovered that one of the two "sailors" was a woman. Patrolman F. F. Springfield was summoned and took the couple to the Seventh Precinct station.

There, Simplicio C. Parojinog, 23, of 516 20th st., South Arlington, and his wife, Mary, 25, said they merely wanted to see the picture together. Police called the Navy Shore Patrol to determine if the couple would have to face charges of illegally wearing the uniform.

Cab Inspection Warning

The drivers of about one fourth of the District's 8076 cab fleet were warned yesterday to get started toward inspection stations or risk a $10 fine or impoundment of their cabs.

Keneipp said he would not extend the deadline.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys
If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

.38 Revolver Sought In Md. Murders

Anne Arundel (Md.) police yesterday asked neighboring States and counties to be on the lookout for a .38-caliber revolver, after evidence showed it was not a .32 pistol that killed John Mahlan and Mary Kline.

Chief John H. Souers said inspection of .32-caliber pistols picked up yesterday at a general store near Annapolis, and of cartridges and bullet fragments which have been found, led to the conclusion that the death weapon was of a larger size.

He pointed to the fact that two .38-caliber cartridges had been found within 2 miles of the spot where the 25-year-old postal clerk's car was discovered a few miles southeast of Glen Burnie.

They were among five empty shells, "ranging from .32 to .38 caliber," that have been turned in.

Mahlan's body and that of his 18-year-old companion were found some 12 miles from the man's car, both with bullet holes in their heads.

Chief Souers added that a 50-year-old man, questioned yesterday "in connection with the pistols," was still being held last night. Souers said, however, that he would be released—along with the weapons—"as soon as his story checks out."

Slug fragments taken from the murder victims' heads and one found in Mahlan's bullet-punctured car have led police to believe the murder weapon was nearer .38 than .32 caliber, it was explained.

At least one of five empty cartridges found in the vicinity of the car and of the bodies, however, was somewhere in between these two sizes, according to police.

As for other clews in the persistent, but thus far apparently fruitless, investigations, Chief Souers refuted reports that he had abandoned fingerprints as a source of evidence.

"We are still waiting to hear more details from the FBI," he said, referring to studies of prints taken from Mahlan's car.

Souers said six persons were interviewed yesterday, but expressed disappointment over the results.

Three men and a woman were questioned "regarding another party in the case," he said, without elaborating.

A 35-year-old Baltimore County man, and one 26 years old from Prince Georges County, were questioned and released, the Chief said.

Hints to Hostesses

Simple Vegetarian Fare Pleases British Minister, Lady Cripps, on Visit Here

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

POTENTIAL hosts and hostesses of esthetic Sir Stafford Cripps and his lady may be puzzled as to what kind of nourishment to offer Britain's most prominent vegetarian couple. The Chancellor of the Exchequer and Lady Cripps are currently in town attending the monetary meetings held at the Shoreham. A few hints have been circulated by discreet British sources, and in the same helpful spirit which, we believe, motivates such arbiters of today's mores as Emily Price Post and Mary Haworth, we pass them on.

Here goes—No meat or fish in any form; eggs are eaten preferably scrambled or as an omelet; fruit, vegetables, fresh and cooked, are welcome.

The following are indications which may help in making menus.

LUNCH—1. Scrambled egg and spinach; 2. Scrambled egg and baked potatoes; 3. Omelette; 4. Spaghetti and fresh tomatoes. Grated cheese, handed separately. 5. Any and all vegetables—cooked.

EVENING MEAL—Lady Cripps likes cheese and Ryvita, honey, butter and wholemeal bread. Sir Stafford prefers Muesli, which consists of 1 dessertspoonful rolled oats, 1 dessertspoon shredded wheat, crumbled; 1 dessertspoon grated nuts; 1 large or 2 small grated apples or tomato juice in lieu juice of ½ lemon, 1 bottle Yoghourt

For them both China tea and fresh fruit.

All in all the Cripps seem quite a bargain in hospitality—a few spoons of cereal, a sip of Bulgarian bacilli! This department will gladly contribute a recent gift of china tea reputed worth $25 a pound to any hostess—provided, of course, we are not obligated in any way to watch Sir Stafford down his preferred Muesli!

What the Audience Wore

DROPPING in on the Washington Fashion Designers Institute show at the Mayflower yesterday, gawping at all the handsome creations stitched together by local designers, it seemed only fair to turn tables and mention what they themselves wore. First, Mme. Camille Chautemps, wife of a former Premier of France, who's now a most successful hat designer, chose a chic, swept off face numero of cyclamen felt, tailored and with a small black satin bow as trimming.

Louise Armour, who does such glamorous tricks with extravagant materials, was demure as a kitten in a full skirted frock of alternating black and cocoa brown bands, a small black calot with a swish of aigrettes.

Edith Burrows, who's made a name for herself creating hats, headdresses and such ornamental doodads from unusual materials, was poured into a black crepe gown, swathed her throat in layers of pearls and, not having time to whip up a conventional hat for herself, made very good do with a bandeau of black velvet flowers. Philip Robertson, dreamer-up of some of the most sensational headgear hereabouts, we are happy to report, wore tweeds plus a delectable lemon-yellow wool tie.

Campaigning in Dixie

PROMINENT capitalites dipping through the Deep S'uth found it a-seethe with campaign quips. Former OPA head Paul Porter reports the new Dixiecrat motto—"If first you don't secede, try, try again."

Edward Tomlinson, the Latin-American expert, tottered down to his Georgia home town to register, encountered a fellow townsman, candidate for State Senator, whose ancestral Scotch traits have remained ruggedly uncontaminated by generations of living among openhanded Southern aristocrats.

Their conversation went something like this:

"How's the campaign coming?"

"Oh, fine, just fine and so far not too costly?"

"What do you mean, Mac, not too costly?"

"Well, I started campaigning with two cigars—and I still have 'em."

"Still have them?"

"Sure. This is the way I figure. If I talk to a citizen and he says he's not going to vote for me—then I don't waste a cigar on him. My friends are sure to vote for me—so what's the use of wasting cigars on them? So far I haven't come across anyone except friends and a few characters who claim they aren't voting for me."

Tomlinson, evidently rated as friend, no cigar was proffered. And N. B. Mac won the primary!

Volcanic Leon Henderson these days is as relaxed as can be after his agitated plugging of Americans for Democratic Action. He passes on a nice campaign epilogue. Efforts to raise Democrat dough, says Mr. Henderson, are met with "supreme indifference."

Home Team's Inning

Washington Designers Show Fall Creations

By Peggy Preston

THE HOME TEAM had its big inning yesterday.

Ten local fashion designers staged a show at the Mayflower Hotel to prove that New York doesn't have priority on the "custom made" trade. It was a double-header, with performances at 11:30 and 4 p. m., and it took place in the grand ballroom against a spectacular array of stage props and backdrops.

Banded together under the name of the Washington Fashion Designers Institute, and captained by Charles Latshaw of unique fabrics fame, the stylists have been preparing for a formal debut for more than a year. They coordinated their efforts, creating hats to go with certain costumes, and vice versa.

Their presentation was sponsored by the Washington Committee for Education on Alcoholism and proceeds were for the benefit of that organization. Mrs. John Allan Dougherty was honorary chairman of the event, and cochairmen were Mrs. George Cyrus Thorpe and Mrs. Philip G. Strong.

ENTITLED "AROUND TOWN," the show was presented in a refreshing manner. Charles Latshaw, who served as commentator, designed and painted the colorful backdrops. Designers participating included Mme. Chautemps, whose hats are well known to a number of Washington women; Yvette, whose flair for combining the East and West in her designs, has made her outstanding. Mr. Latshaw, a versatile young man if there ever was one, showed several dresses made of his own specially designed fabrics.

Then there were the children's outfits, created by Mary Davis; hats and dresses by Philip Robertson; gowns by Louise Armour, the former Californian. Hat designers taking part were Moselle, Edith Burrows and Elies. Betty Gray, the other member of the institute, did not show her designs, but will take part in later shows.

SOME OUTSTANDING IMPRESSIONS, gleaned from a runway seat: Beautiful use of Chinese fabrics by Yvette . . . Also her silverblu mink wrap worn with a gray satin suit . . . Splendid gray felt hats, made Cavalier fashion, by Moselle . . . The B. T. I.'s (Beat the Inflation) hats by Edith Burrows. These are tiny pillboxes of velvet, done in pretty tones.

Louise Armour's purple tissue wool dinner dress with pink, swing-back bolero . . . Blue mist chantilly lace afternoon dress by Philip Robertson . . . Forest green taffeta party frock for a teenager by Mary Davis . . . Mme. Chautemps' feathered chapeaux . . . Gold and green turban by Elies.

Rock Creek Club To Give Dog Show For All Breeds

The show will be judged by local and out-of-town experts, Mrs. Anderson said. Premium lists and entry blanks may be obtained at veterinarians' offices and pet shops in Greater Washington.

The Keyes estate may be reached by proceeding out Georgia ave. extended about 6 miles to Lay Hill rd., turning right and driving 1 mile to the estate.

Pick Your Bride By Nape of Neck, Says Stylist

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—One way to pick a wife is to look at her nape-of-the-neck hairline.

Mark, a coiffeur who features a cozy $50 futuristic coiffure, said that after studying several thousand feminine napes he had reached these conclusions:

"A girl with a three-pointed hairline is generous, open-handed, and will put herself out for friends. But if the two outer points reach lower than the center, beware—she is the type of person who, if taken advantage of, will retaliate with great venom.

"A straight hairline indicates a gambling instinct and executive ability.

"A five-point hairline shows a rare sense of humor. A girl with a mushrooming, sprawling hairline is artistic, moody—and very unstable. If the hair has a tendency to swirl from left to right, that is a sign the girl has a liberal turn of mind."

Chiquita Entertains

Food Editors Sample Bananas As Luncheon's Main Dish

By Lucia Brown

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Chiquita Banana, the gal whose song about food became the "hit of the jingle-jangle parade," entertained 115 food editors at luncheon at the Waldorf Astoria today.

The editors, who came from all over the United States to attend the Newspaper Food Editors Conference here, were greeted by Chiquita in her native costume—a red and yellow gown and a sombrero with banana crown. After singing her famous song about not "keeping bananas in the refrigerator," she went on to tell us new ways of using bananas for main course meals and to reveal glimpses of her past.

Starting life as a jingle which nobody even noticed for six months, the Chiquita song suddenly became a hit when dance bands all over the country began playing it. Finally, it was even played in a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and turned up as the subject of a Sunday sermon at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church in Cleveland, Ohio.

At today's luncheon, the fruit company sponsoring Chiquita showed a series of colorful one-minute lesson movies on banana uses. Main dish in the meal served was delicious ham banana rolls. Made by rolling firm bananas in thin slices of boiled ham, covered with cheese sauce, and baking in the oven for 30 minutes.

'Steamboat Supper'

The tropical atmosphere of the Chiquita luncheon was quite a contrast with last night's "steamboat supper" sponsored by one of the Nation's largest pickle companies. Here we were taken back to the day when paddle-wheel steamboats plied the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. Huge gilt framed pictures of famous river boats adorned the walls, a caliope wailed, and a quartette sang sweet and low, in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf, where the dinner was held. More than a dozen different kinds of pickles and relishes in small dishes circled the epergnes of fruit that centered the table. Piece de resistance on the menu was a chicken and oyster pie a la Queen City, made with fresh oysters, and diced cooked chicken. Only modern touch was the fact that chicken soup, canned by the same company that gave the dinner, was poured over the meat before it was topped by a pie crust and baked in the oven.

At breakfast at Sherry's this morning, the president of a large dairy products corporation gave food editors an explanation of today's high milk prices.

"The price of milk is high because the farmer's cost of producing milk has gone way up," he said. "The cost of labor, machinery, trucks, and all the things needed to produce and process milk have risen tremendously. Nevertheless, milk prices have increased only 78 per cent since 1939 while the price of all food combined has gone up 116 per cent.

Instant Tea Is New

Instant tea, a new product which will soon reach the Washington market, was spotlighted at another meeting held this morning. It's a companion for the instant coffee housewives have been enjoying for a number of years, we are told. All you do is mix a bit with hot water and serve. There's no worrying with tea-leaf straining or timing the brew.

The conference, which gives food editors an opportunity to garner a bumper crop of news for their readers and taste some of the best American foods and cookery, will continue through Friday.

Mrs. Buck Sees Hope for Peace After Crisis

"THERE'S hope for world peace if top United States officials can avert war during this terrific crisis now," declared Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in a luncheon address yesterday before members of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Club.

The federation head told the audience that numerous organizations in this country and abroad are working on programs to keep permanent peace if a holocaust can be avoided now.

Mrs. Buck cited the World Council of Churches' Assembly in Amsterdam as one organization displaying leadership toward unity. "The churches once fought religious wars and split on various questions," she explained. "Now they again are unified and pointing a way to world union."

She also commended the National Education Association's 10-point program for world citizenship and pointed out several educational projects in this country promoted by various organizations and the Government. Specifically mentioned were the 21,000 foreign students who studied in the United States last year and the 11,000 American students studying abroad. "In addition 135 exchange teachers from Great Britain, Canada and France are studying here now," she said. "All this is bound to leave an effect on world understanding and peace."

Mrs. Buck announced that she would leave November 3 for a month's visit to Japan, Korea, China, the Philippines and Hawaii. She will go to Japan on an invitation from General MacArthur and to Korea on invitation of Lieut. Gen. John P. Hodges. In China she will be entertained by the American Women's Club of Shanghai. While in Manila she will be guest of the Philippine Federation of Women's Clubs.

Purpose of the visit to Japan is to meet with the women's organizations there to see how the GFWC may help in maintaining these groups in the democratic type of organizations established in women's clubs in the U. S. A.

Women's Institute Gets Report On World Council of Churches

By Genevieve Reynolds

What the church people back home do with the findings of the World Council of Churches will determine the ultimate success of the recent conference held in Amsterdam. So declared Dr. Margaret T. Applegarth, one of the conference consultants, in an address last night at the opening session of the three-day institute of the Washington Council of Church Women.

She told the some 400 women, gathered in Calvary Baptist Church, that despite the difference in European and American thinking, real unity has been achieved at the Assembly. "The one place where there was absolutely no division was in a Sunday morning Communion service," she remarked.

Giving a few sidelights of the conference proceedings and aside comments expressed by delegates, Dr. Appelgarth told how one man's comment sized up the feeling of the people the first few days. The graphic remark was, "The Church is too sentimental for words. All seem to expect a great moral phrase to be issued by someone that would mend everything."

No Panacea Expected

"Eventually, the delegates realized that no such panacea words would be issued", she continued, "and got down to realities."

Dr. Appelgarth expressed a belief that women would gain recognition in church work since the Amsterdam assembly put them in the spotlight. She cited one delegate who still thought the male superior to the female in every way. His stock answer, she said was a quotation of Genesis 11, the gist of which was "women came after man."

Mrs. Wallace N. Streeter, council president, presided and presented the speaker.

Youth Choirs Sing

Included on the program was a devotional period conducted by Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and special music by the Boys' and Girls' Choir of the Church. The benediction was pronounced by the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, president, Washington Federation of Churches.

Preceding the dinner an exhibit of dolls representing U. S. Territories—Alaska and Hawaii—plus several provinces of China was held under the direction of M. E. Farrell.

Highlights of today's session will be a discussion on China, conducted by the Rev. Alfred Dixon Heininger, who served for 10 years in Northern China under the American Board of Foreign Missions.

Hadassah Unit Hears Leader On Israeli

Mrs. Julian Ansell, member of the national board of Hadassah, yesterday deplored the assassination of UN Mediator Count Bernadotte at the initial session of Washington Hadassah's first administrative institute held in the Jewish Community Center.

"At the same time," she said, "the assassination of Bernadotte cannot be ascribed to the new state of Israel any more than the assassination can be attributed to America as a whole."

The speaker said that she opposed the Bernadotte plan of shifting two-thirds of Israel territory. "Shifting of two-thirds of Israel territory to King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan would amount to rewarding the Arabs for their defiance of the United Nations," she asserted.

Mrs. Ansell said that officials of the Israeli government had insisted that Count Bernadotte carry an armed escort with him, but that the U. N. peacemaker had refused the offer.

Bernadotte's plan would leave the state of Israel too small to develop a sound economy and would not leave room for admitting thousands of the Jewish refugees from the DP camps of Europe, according to Mrs. Ansell.

During the institute plans were mapped out for several benefits including a pledge luncheon on November 29.

Mrs. Joseph Freedman, president of the Washington chapter, presided.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, Now Married, Is Deeply Resentful Of Mother's Habit of Vilifying Father, Who Abandoned the Family 16 Years Ago

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My parents were divorced 16 years ago, when we children were very young, and since then mother takes every opportunity to turn us against my father.

No matter who is present, if dad's name is mentioned she goes into a rage about how he didn't want us or care for us. If I say anything in defense of him, she says I was too young to realize what a terrible person he was and that I should be grateful to her for taking us away from him and working to provide for us.

She has turned my sister against him, but my brother and I still visit him when we can. He has always been eager to have us visit him, even when we were still small (I'm married now), and I know he loves us dearly.

Girl and Brother Are Loyal to Dad

IT IS TRUE that he hasn't supported us, and has sent us only a small gift at Christmas (he never missed once); but he doesn't make much money and has five children by his second wife to support, which I think accounts for the meager gifts.

When I tell my mother this, she replies that I am stupid and don't love her for all she has done. She says my father isn't entitled to enjoy our company and that we shouldn't even write to him. He is in poor health now but still works hard every day without complaining; and he saves every penny he can, so that his little children will have security when he dies.

Now does he seem like a man I should turn against and hate, just because he and my mother couldn't get along years ago? Or should I do as the Bible says and honor my father and give him the comfort of my love in his last years? Please advise me, as mother is driving me crazy with her tirades of hate. D. S.

Girl Is Mostly Fighting Mother

DEAR D. S.: Psychologists tell us it is natural to find special closeness of feeling between father and daughter, mother and son, in family life; and while this isn't always the case, it is at least a general tendency.

It may be that from babyhood you felt this affinity for your dad. And when you lost his companionship, also the sense of security and the prestige among playmates of having a papa at hand, and realized that your mother had acted aggressively to dispense with him, via parental divorce, perhaps you charged this calamity to her, childlike, and developed great subjective hostility towards her in consequence, with the result that you've been emotionally at odds ever since, wrestling rather blindly over the issue of father, thereby inciting other feud-material besides.

In any event, it seems clear that you and your mother just don't "get along," for obscure reasons that neither comprehends, and that each is compulsively motivated to prove the other "wrong" in major disputes, but especially about dad. And concerning him, it is my inference that his worth as a person and parent doesn't merit the partisan championship you've seen fit to articulate since reaching an age to speak your feelings.

Father's Record Isn't Admirable

IF IN FACT he did desert three children, in the sense of casting the full burden of their support upon the mother, and thereafter indulged himself in begetting five more, he definitely forfeited claim to love and respect from the first mother's progeny, and you are burning incense to a dream-man in making a sentimental case for him.

In my opinion you don't love or honor him realistically; you don't know him well enough for that. Rather, in long-time conflict with your mother, you've defiantly identified yourself with the supposedly more sympathetic (or ideal-type) father-figure; and your "defense" of him is a standpat way of repudiating her, who on the score of loyal performance is much more deserving of compassionate tribute.

Your mother's vituperation of him is nonconstructive, of course; and chiefly to be deplored not from the angle of alleged injustice to him, but because of the damaging effects on the children's self esteem and her mental health. She does violence to both by her hate-tirades; but in her shoes, you'd probably feel equally resentful of a similar deal; and might express your grievance just as badly. So bear with her charitably; don't contest her views; and don't glamorize your weakling dad. M. H.

A Place For Everything

Spacious Closets in '48 Homes Answer Problems of Storage

By Lucia Brown

Gone are the days of the skinny little clothes closet, bulging with junk that fell on your head the minute you cracked the door.

Well, maybe not quite gone—but you'll certainly think such overstuffed crevices are a thing of the past if you tour the 13 "Homes of '48" in the housing exhibit sponsored by The Washington Post.

Many different types of clothes closets are seen in these houses, but, as a whole, they reflect a trend toward (a) spaciousness, (b) departmentalization, and (c) smart location.

To take the last quality first, you may be astonished to see a little square door beside the big one in the recessed entranceway of the model house built by the Cambridge Construction Co. at Alta Vista Terrace, Bethesda, Md. Despite appearances, this is not for the cat but leads to a small closet where muddy galoshes and overshoes may be deposited before you enter the living room.

'Departments' for All

As to "departmentalization," the house built by S. Weinberg & Sons, in Columbia Pines, Annandale, Va., has closets which are practically guaranteed to keep your clothes in order. Inside their sliding doors are separate places to hang short coats and long dresses, different cubby holes for hats, shoes, gloves, and other types of clothing.

The linen closets in this house are impressive, too. The one in the bathroom has a sliding glass door so you can see where to find a towel no matter how much soap gets in your eyes. Outside the bathroom door is a larger "departmentalized" closet where the bulk of your linen supply can be kept.

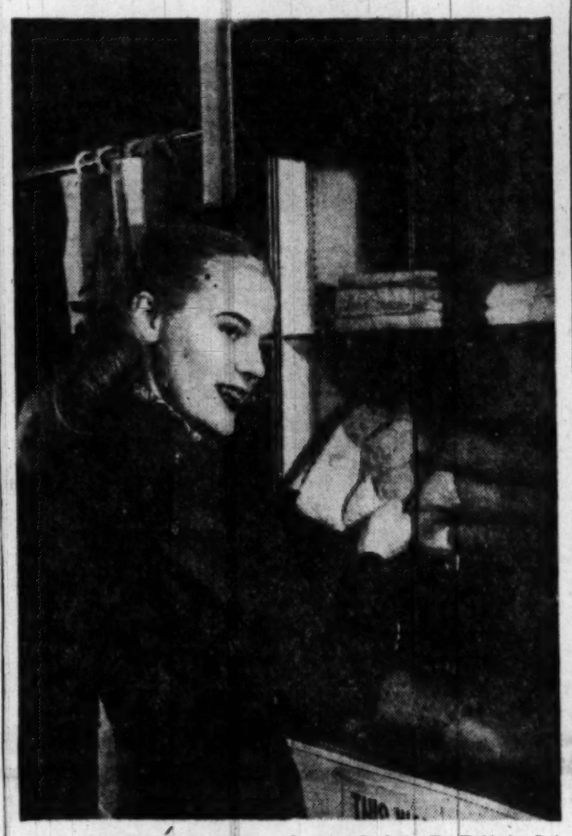
Some of the houses have clothes closets that follow more conventional lines but are so big there'll be small excuse for a "cluttered look" about the house. Closet lights are a feature of many, of course, and one or two have cedar linings. Some have handy little built-in shoe racks on the floor, too.

Doors Fold Up

Closets in the Camalier and Crosby house in Chevy Chase, Md., have modern doors that make them a part of the decorative scheme of the room. These doors are of heavy imitation leather and fold up like accordions when they're pushed back.

The gaily painted interiors of closets in several of the houses contribute to the color schemes of the rooms, too. Others have been stocked with brightly flowered garment bags, accessory boxes, hat stands, and covered hangers by the stores equipping them.

All in all, the closets in the "Homes of '48" are worth peeking into as you make the rounds. They may not be Grand Central Station, but they're larger than the closets of yesteryear. And most have a place for everything, even the family skeleton.



By Robert Burchette—The Washington Post.

This waist-high, clear-view linen closet is in the bathroom of the model "Home of '48" built by S. Weinberg and Sons, furnished by the Hecht Co., and located in Columbia Pines, Annandale, Va. The sliding doors of this handy modern cupboard are of plate glass

The closet door becomes a decorative feature of the room when it's an accordion pleated one of light brown leatherette like this. It eliminates the bother of a swinging door, too, since it folds back to one side. This ultra-modern arrangement is found in the model house in Chevy Chase, Md., built by Camalier and Crosby and furnished by Mazor Masterpieces

Practical Pointers

Keep the sewing machine oiled and cleaned if you wish good service.

Sometimes the cloudy windows need only a wiping with a clean dry cloth to make them sparkle again.

Turn on the electric fan in the laundry the next rainy wash day and see what a big help it is in the drying of the clothes.

To Keep Cut Flowers Fresh

Cut flowers will last a long time if they are taken care of properly. A half inch should be cut off their stems each day, the stale water thrown out and fresh put in. Leaves should be stripped from the flowers if they are low enough to be below the water. The vase should be sufficiently large to allow the stems to breathe and take in the water. Any strings should be removed before arranging the flowers. If a powder is used to keep the flowers alive, cut the stems off a little each day and add as much fresh water to the powder and water mixture as has been taken up by the flowers during the day previous.

How to Remove Rust Stains

Will you tell me how to remove rust stains from colored cotton material? K. A. C.

A rust-removing soap that comes in tubes and is sold by some local drug stores is excellent for this purpose. Test with it first to be sure it won't affect the color of your material.

I believe I can help M. H. H. on the subject of New York style baked beans. Just as New York clam chowder differs from the New England style by using tomatoes, so New York baked beans differ from the the New England style by being cooked with tomatoes, and having less sweetening in them. I am away from home and do not have the exact recipe, but it is more a question of seasoning and method than exact proportion, so here goes.

In the first place, while the small pea bean used for Boston beans may be used, a larger, mealier bean, such as the Marrow Fat or White Kidney bean, or even baby limas, produces a better-flavored dish. Beans should be soaked overnight and boiled off once or twice. When partially cooked, but not soft, they should be put on to cook again in about 2 cups water, ½ pound salt pork, bacon ends, or ham bone, 2 large sliced onions, 1 cup tomato juice or puree, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, and about a half cup of brown sugar or molasses. They should cook slowly on top of the stove until they are soft but firm, and until all the liquid is absorbed. Hot water or tomato juice should be added from time to time. (Perhaps the purist would omit the sugar or molasses, but we like it.)

About an hour before serving, they should be transferred to a casserole or pudding pan, seasoned with salt and pepper to taste, the salt pork or bacon cut in serving-sized pieces and put over the top, and the whole browned in a slow oven.

New York beans should be mealy and quite dry. They are good cold. Left-over beans may be pureed and combined with bouillon or milk for a delicious soup.

P. S.: Never, never serve Boston Brown Bread with New York style beans! They just don't go together. Thinly sliced rye bread, salt sticks, crusty rolls, French bread, or graham rolls are the perfect accompaniment. One of our favorite menus at home for parties, club suppers, etc., is baked beans, grilled franks, pickled beets with lots of onions, a large tossed salad, and a tray of assorted cheeses including sharp cheddar. It is equally good for sit-down suppers or a buffet.

P. P. S.: Once the basic recipe is worked out, there is no end to the variations—chili powder to taste may be added before baking, or finely chopped basil and tarragon may be added to the tomato juice. For a one-dish meal thick slices of tomato, sprinkled with crumbs and butter and strips of bacon, may cover the top of the pan. It can then be placed under the broiler before serving.

For the mixed bridge party or poker crowd, toast slices may be spread with deviled ham, topped with beans (generously) and a slice of cheese, and popped in the broiler until the cheese is melted. Serve with pickles and olives and plenty of hot coffee. Better be prepared for calls for seconds.

M. G. H.

Many thanks, M. G. H., for your interesting and mouth-watering letter.

What utensils and ingredients do I need to go about removing the finish from an old mahogany night stand? I don't want to paint it, but to bring the surface down to the natural wood and keep it highly waxed.

M. R. D.

Commercial paint remover is the simplest and most satisfactory method for quickly removing paint without injury to the wood. It can be purchased at any reliable paint store. It is spread on with a brush, allowed to remain until finish softens, then scraped off with a spatula or putty knife on flat surfaces. A stiff brush and perhaps a square of coarse burlap should be used for carvings. Two or more coats of remover may be necessary to remove all the old finish.

When the finish is removed, the wood should be thoroughly wiped off with turpentine, gasoline, or whatever the paint remover calls for. This removes the grease of the varnish remover. Use fine sandpaper or No. 00 steel wool to smooth down before proceeding with the finishing. Sandpaper can be fastened around a block of wood for sanding smooth surfaces. Any reliable commercial paint remover will have explicit directions for using on its container.

I wonder if you could advise me as to removing scorched marks from a good cotton dress? The scorch marks are not deep, but have that yellowish look.

W. R. P.

Washing the dress again in soap and water should completely remove slight scorch stains. If the dress is white so that sun would not harm the color, exposing the spots to sun will also help to remove them. If this treatment doesn't remove the scorch, then hydrogen peroxide might be used on it. Dampen a white cotton cloth with peroxide and lay it on the stain. Cover with a white dry cloth, then press with a medium warm iron. If the moisture soaks through the cloth, replace it with a dry one. Ironing directly on a cloth moistened with peroxide or on the dampened stain itself after the cloth has been removed will cause rust stains on the garment. Repeat the treatment until the stain is completely removed. Rinse well. If the dress is not white, be sure to test this treatment on an inside hem or seam before trying it on the stains.

The Last Few Drops

Those last elusive drops of fat can be removed from the top of soup by throwing a lettuce leaf into the pot. It will absorb the grease and may be removed as soon as it has served its purpose.

To Slim Those Dumpy Figures

Exercises for the Short-Waisted Girls

By Ida Jean Kain

Add an excess 10 pounds or 20 to 5 feet and you've got a dumpy figure . . . more's the pity, for so many women are just a whiff over 5 feet, and short-waisted to boot, which makes matters worse.

To get the picture, measure between the tip-top of the hipbone and the natural waistline. If there is barely a 3-inch span twixt waist and hipbone, you're built for bulges. The shorter the span the more the padding on the waist will bunch up.

We can't do a thing about structure, but we can keep live tone in the midriff muscles, and of course keep the calories from brimming over.

Just for fun, unscrew the handle from the carpet sweeper and, using it as a wand, stretch and bend—forward, sideward and around.

Position: Standing, feet well apart, wand grasped at each end and held against waistline.

Movement: Bend forward at the waistline, down over the wand, pulling up firmly with middle muscles. Keep elbows and knees straight. Straighten and try again, this time bending a bit farther—three times for good measure.

Now a side-bender . . .

Position: Standing, feet well apart, wand held against chest, arms straight out at sides, shoulder level.

Movement: Bend sideward at the waistline, middle muscles yanked up and in and both feet on floor. Straighten and bend to the other side, trying to increase the bend.

Softies drop out here . . . this is rugged and stretches all muscles around the waistline . . .

Position: Standing, feet well apart, hand held against back of shoulders.

Movement: Whirl at the waistline and swing arms from one side to the other as far as possible. Pull up and in with middle muscles and make waist the pivot.

To be willowy, follow Susan Hayward's example and exercise with a wand. Susie has one of the cutest figures in films and she's the mother of twin sons. Easier wand exercises are given in Ida Jean Kain's column today.

To tone the side-front muscles of the abdomen, which on a short figure bunch up just south of the waistline . . .

Position: Lying on back on floor, legs stretched down, arms out at sides, shoulder level.

Thoughts on Meal Planning

A pleasing company breakfast consists of stewed fruit, ham omelet, creamed potatoes and buttered toast.

A dainty luncheon consists of sliced breast of chicken on shredded lettuce and garnished with mayonnaise, potato chips, peas, small tea biscuits, prune souffle and iced tea.

An appetizing dinner consists of clam cocktail, boiled mutton with caper sauce, candied sweet potatoes, spinach, carrot and cabbage salad, fruit tart.

11 Agencies Ask $68,713 More Funds

Eleven District regulatory agencies asked for a $68,713 increase for operations in fiscal year 1950, compared to this year's appropriations.

A twelfth agency, the District Rent Control Administration, which is now operating on a $100,000 a year budget, did not enter a request since it is scheduled to end March 31, 1949, unless Congress extends it. The 1950 fiscal year begins July 1, 1949.

The regulatory groups submitted a total request of $921,700, while this year's appropriations total $921,700. Most of them kept close to current figures, although all included some requests to cover mandatory salary increases.

Departments of Weights

The sharpest boost came in the Department of Weights, Measures and Markets where $188,345 was asked, more than $43,000 over this year's budget.

J. Thomas Kennedy, head of the department, asked for $28,000 to build a new water line to the Municipal Fish Wharf and Market replacing an inadequate 3-inch line ad $20,000 to replace a 4-inch ver line of insufficient capacity ere. Kennedy offered some savs in the department costs to set the requested amounts.

Highlights of the other agencies' uests were:

A million dollars for expansion of facilities to meet growing needs of the District was asked yesterday by the Division of Sanitation in its budget request for fiscal year 1950, which begins July 1, 1949.

Of this amount, $400,000 was asked to complete work on a $918,700 refuse transfer station at New Jersey ave. and K st. se, and to start construction of a $1,375,000 garage and shops building at Mount Olivet rd. and West Virginia ave. ne. The first project would be completed in the current year and the latter during the fiscal year 1950.

The remaining $600,000 was requested to enable letting of a contract for erection of the $1,800,000 incinerator No. 3 at Mount Olivet rd. and West Virginia ave. ne. The project was originally estimated at $1,160,000 but current estimates have boosted the total, according to William Xanten, superintendent of the sanitary division.

About $130,000 of the $600,000 amount would be used to prepare plans and specifications for the proposed incinerator, Xanten declared the project was "essential" because the city's combustible refuse has exceeded incinerator capacity and forced the division to use burning dumps for disposal.

The total budget request was $4,501,000, compared with $3,265,000 appropriated last year. Last year's budget did not include any funds for capital outlay, although some construction was continued under previously authorized funds.

The $3,501,000 request for operating expenses included an item for addition of 28 workers and purchase of 32 vehicles.

Thirteen of the additional workers were asked for the street-cleaning department because of the "constant growth of the city's street mileage." Another five were listed to provide an added collection crew consisting of a driver and four laborers in the garbage collection department. The remaining 10 were designated for the trash collection and incineration department.

Among the new vehicles requested were a rotary type snow loader at $12,500 and a self-propelled abrasive spreading unit at $12,500; 10 trucks as replacements in the street-cleaning department; 8 replacement vehicles and 1 new truck for the garbage-ash collection department; 2 trailers and a truck-tractor as additional equipment in the refuse transfer station; 8 replacement trucks and 2 added ones for the trash collection department.

A hearing will be held at 10 a. m. today on charges against Spellman McGowan of 1433 P st. nw. for sale of alcoholic beverages during prohibited hours and for permitting a patron to drink while standing.

Bus Now Stops On Parking Lot At 25th and E

Added popularity of the Christian Heurich brewery fringe parking lot is expected as a result of the new bus stop on the lot.

P. Y. K. Howat, head of the District motor vehicle parking agency, said previously the nearest stop on the Capital Transit Co. shuttle bus line was around the corner, but one is now designated at 25th and E sts. nw.

Reviewing the first week of operations yesterday, Howat said he was "very much encouraged, although we still have a long way to go." More than 1500 cars were parked on the lots near the brewery and the Municipal Center, 3d st. and Constitution ave. nw., during the week, and 95 per cent of those were driven by women, indicating the lot was filling a need for shoppers, Howat said.

Room-to-Be Electrocuted

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP).—"Please, rd, don't let anybody touch me!" That was the final prayer last ight of a writhing young bride-room-to-be, his body charged with electricity from an exposed wire in the flat he was remodeling into a honeymoon apartment on Chicago's West Side.

The victim was Sebastian Dimatteo, 24, who fought in the South Pacific as a ball turret gunner.

A grief-stricken witness was Miss Natalie Carnaggio, 21, of Forest Park, whom he was to take as his bride Saturday. She had warned him of the dangerous wire, but her cry was too late.

The young couple, Miss Carnaggio's sister, Mrs. Marianne Kovach, and a friend, Joseph Catalana, 17, were remodeling the apartment.

As the men tore out a partition the bride-to-be saw the exposed wire and cried:

"Don't touch that wire. Turn the juice off first."

But as she spoke, Diamatteo touched the wire and fell to the floor.

Despite Dimatteo's prayer Catalana insulated his hands with a raincoat and freed his friend. He applied artificial respiration until a fire department rescue squad arrived. Their effort was futile.

'Exemplary' McClure Recital Opens Art Institute Series

The Institute of Contemporary Arts opened its first series of chamber concerts last night with an exemplary piano recital by Harry McClure.

Music you do not hear every day in the week, or every concert season of your life, was featured. There were familiar names, such as Mozart, Paul Hindemith, and Roy Harris. There were less familiar names of such luminaries as Samuel Scheidt, Johann Froberger, and Cecil Effinger. Above all, there wsa music for its own sake, without regard to the box office of a possible film career.

A pianist played with remarkable understanding music by seven diverging masters. The programs devised by the new institute do them great credit. If they can present them in manner equal to last night's enterprising beginning, they will have done themselves and Washington a real service.

McClure plays with natural instincts which are generally correct. If tempos were not always maintained at even pace in the fugues of Hindemith and Mozart, one was still perfectly able to follow the interwoven strands of the involved structures. McClure's tone has a fine sheen, though it is sometimes unduly modified. But to complain of excessive moderation in tone these days is almost to praise.

It was especially stimulating to hear excerpts from Hindemith's Ludis Tonalis, and the prelude and fugue of Cecil Effinger, the latter played from manuscript. In both form and conception as polyphonic work for piano, the Effinger is an exciting and well-made score.

We deeply regret our error in announcing that the concerts of the Institute are open to the public without charge. There is a membership fee, entitling members to the entire series. There is also a fee for single admissions.

The council met at the Lynnbrook School in Bethesda.

Honor Is Paid To Memory of Hero of Bataan

Maj. Thompson B. Maury, a Bataan "death march" hero who lost his life in the sinking of a Japanese prison ship in December, 1944, was honored posthumously yesterday when the Bronze Star Medal was presented to one of his sons, Richard B. Maury, 12, of 906 Lewis ave., Rockville, Md.

Attending the presentation in the Pentagon office of Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, commander of the Military District of Washington, were the widow, Mrs. Priscilla B. Maury, three other children, Anne, 11; William, 8, and Sally, 7, and the major's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maguder G. Maury of 5031 V st. nw.

The award was made for heroic action during the "death march" out of Bataan, in the Philippines, in April, 1942. Major Maury, though bayonetted by a Japanese guard for his action, continued to carry a fellow officer who had fallen by the roadside. Major Maury, a 1934 West Point graduate, lost his life when a Japanese ship on which he was imprisoned was sunk.

10 Hackers Face Charge of Seeking Out-of-Town Trips

Like the 17 cabbies hailed before a closed hearing of the board Monday, they will be required to show cause why their licenses should not be suspended or revoked.

The board yesterday afternoon reviewed testimony in the Monday cases, but refused to divulge its recommendations which probably will go to the Commissioners Thursday or Friday, Mrs. Mary Silver, board chairman, said.

Cost of Living Raise Aim of Teachers' Group

A cost of living pay raise and sick leave with pay for teachers have been set by the Education Association of the District as its major objectives this year.

Plans for bringing the financial plight of local teachers before Congress were outlined Monday by Dr. Regis Boyle, president of the association and teacher at Eastern High School, and Dr. Myra Seitz, legislative chairman and teacher at Central. The meeting, the first of the school year, was held at the Burdick Vocational High School.

Both the Board of Education and the Commissioners are committed to a $330 a year raise for teachers, the amount granted Federal employes last year, Dr. Boyle said. The board has indorsed the sick leave proposal but the Commissioners have yet to aprove it. The association, local affiliate of the National Education Association, has a membership of 1400 teachers.

GI Bill Training Refused Many August Applicants

Veterans seeking G. I. bill training in avocational or recreational courses numbered more than 11,000 in August, but the Veterans Administration approved less than half their applications.

Of 11,148 requests for training, a total of 4897 were approved, VA officials announced yesterday. Final action on 6062 others was deferred, they said, because the information submitted on them was insufficient to prove the training sought would be used in either present or future businesses or occupations.

Flight training, or related courses in aviation, were sought by more than half the applicants, with approval going to 2427.

Applicants for courses "frequently pursued for avocational or recreational purposes" must submit proof the course will relate to their present or future business or occupation.

K. S. Adams, president of the company, said unprecedented civilian demand and the increasing requirements for all petroleum products have forced upon the oil industry large capital expenditures.

$2,000,000 WASHINGTON SUBURBAN Sanitary District, Maryland, bond sale guaranteed by Montgomery and Prince Georges counties. Sealed proposals will be received until 3 o'clock p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) on Wednesday, October 6, 1948, by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission at its office, 4017 Hamilton street, Hyattsville, Md., for the following bonds of the Washington Suburban Sanitary District, dated October 1, 1948: $2,000,000 Series "TTT" bonds, maturing annually October 1, $50,000, 1949 to 1988, inclusive, without option or prior payment, to be issued under the authority of Chapter 122 of the Acts of 1918 of the General Assembly of Maryland, as amended, for water main and sewer construction. Denomination, $1,000; principal and semiannual interest (A and O 1) payable at Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., Hyattsville, Md., or at the Suburban Trust Co., Baltimore, Md., or at Chemical Bank & Trust Co., New York City, N. Y., at holder's option; general obligations; unlimited tax; coupon bonds registerable as to principal alone; exempt from taxation by the State of Maryland and by the counties and municipalities in said State; unconditionally guaranteed as to both principal and interest by Montgomery and Prince Georges counties by indorsement on each bond; form of bonds substantially the same as bonds of the last preceding series. There will be no auction. Bonds will be delivered about November 9, 1948, at place of purchaser's choice. Bidders are requested to name the interest rate or rates, not exceeding 4% per annum, in a multiple of ¼ or 1/10 of 1%, and each bidder must specify in his bid the amount and the maturities of the bonds of each rate. No bid may name more than three interest rates and all bonds maturing on the same date must bear interest at the same rate. No bid of less than par and accrued interest or for less than all of the bonds offered will be entertained. The bonds will be awarded to the bidder offering to purchase the bonds at the lowest interest cost to the District, such cost to be determined by deducting the total amount of the premium bid from the aggregate amount of interest upon all of the bonds until their respective maturities. Each proposal must be inclosed in a sealed envelope marked "Proposal for Bonds," and be accompanied by a certified check upon an incorporated bank or trust company, payable unconditionally to the order of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for $20,000. The right to reject any or all bids is reserved. The approving opinion of Messrs. Mitchell and Pershing, New York City, will be furnished the purchasers without cost. Circular containing forms, plans and specifications may be obtained in Room 427, District Building. (Tel. NA. 6000, ext. 2376.)

MEN
READ CAREFULLY

Thursday, September 30, at 1:30 p. m. sharp, I want to talk with 26 men who are really ambitious in securing a position that will give them steady employment the year round. In other words, there are no laying-off periods and consequently income is the income that really counts. It doesn't matter what your past employment has been. All we ask is that you be willing to study and learn as we teach you our work. It will also be necessary that you be willing to get along on $75-$85 week for the first 4 to 6 weeks while learning our work.

You must also be able to give the names of 3 people who will vouch for your honesty and integrity. We prefer men who are married or men who have some sense of responsibility.

I would also like to talk to a few men who are mechanically inclined and who know a good thing when they see it.

Therefore, if you are honest and of good character and a willing worker, and neat in appearance, come in and talk with me.

We've heard about a 7-day-old baby riding on an airliner and about a 5-day-old's trip.

Now Stewardess Betty Koontz of 517 Four Mile rd., Alexandria, Va., wonders what will happen when this competition is reduced to the irreducible, and a child is born aloft.

Will his "place of birth" be listed as "8,000 feet over Hyattsville"? Will his weight be given as "less than the 40 lbs. allowed"? Will his home town be "a fluffy stack of cumulo nimbus"?

And, what's more important, will the poor kid have to buy a ticket? Will the stork?

Dear Bill:

Do you have the typesetters cowed, or are you just lucky? Why does your column have less typographical errors than most of the remainder of the paper?

Douglas B. Netherwood,
4936 Rodman st. nw.

Dear Doug:

It's a combination of many things. For example:

1. My column appears on an "early" page; that means it's one of the pages which are gotten out of the way early, so that, later on, the composing room can concentrate on last-minute changes in news pages. Less hurry on this page results in fewer mistakes.

2. Most typos appear in a newspaper's "bulldog" (first) edition, and are caught later on, in the "city" or home delivery run. But since newspapers are put out by humans, some mistakes are bound to slip through on any page.

3. Most reporters don't have an opportunity to "read proof" after the regular proofreaders finish making corrections, but columnists do—and two heads are still better than one.

4. After kidding other people about typos so much, I don't DARE have too many of them myself.

Bill.

AH, SWEET MYSTERY

For years, I've wondered what the catcher said to the pitcher when they met half-way between the mound and the plate. Now I'm pondering another of life's mysteries:

What does the driver ahead of me say to the policeman, to get through roadblocks which I never seem to be able to negotiate?

It happened again over the weekend, when I tried to drive around Hains Point. The Park Police had set up a barricade, and were waving traffic off to a side road.

But sure enough, the car ahead of me pulled boldly up to the cops and the driver said something to the officer on duty.

I saw the policeman make a sour face, and heard him mutter, "Okay, okay—go on through."

Emboldened, I thought I'd try to explain that I, too, wanted to drive around the Point. But I couldn't even get close enough to open my chops before he was yelling:

"Whatsa matter with ya, ya blind or somethin'? Turn off there."

Now I can't help but wonder what the secret is. What are the magic words that make policemen so obliging at times?

HOW'S THAT AGAIN

The other day I reported an "Overheard" conversation which included the words: "If her mother were still alive, she'd turn over in her grave."

Jerry Richardson of 405 10th st. ne. suspects that the speaker was from Pennsylvania: "It sounds like a Pennsylvania Dutch idiom," she says.

"I was born in the Keystone State, and on more than one occasion I was told: 'The next time you go, you'll stay home.'"

Since Jerry is such a good speech detective, I wonder if she can tell us the breeding grounds of one of my pet peeves—people who say "usually always." That's as bad as the lawyers' "and/or."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three month old kitten. The rule is 'No Pets' and we've been reported." (Jackson 1480-W)

ADD SIGNS

Jack Pearson of 1718 Lawrence st. ne. reports that Jack's Grill, at 3d and G sts. nw., has this sign on its front window: "Breakfast, Television, Dinner."

PROVOCATIVE, EH?

One of the "Don't Walk" signs around the Union Station Plaza was out of kilter the other day, and for hours it merely enjoined all who passed: "Don't."

CHOICE SEAT

Theatergoers usually ask for "two on the aisle," but Mr. Dewey would be glad to settle for "one on the balcony."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—John Gunther telephoned Jay Allen, with whom he worked as a foreign correspondent for many years and who now lives in Carmel, Calif. Allen's telephone is on a nine-party line referred to locally as the Carmel Valley Broadcasting Co. . . . Gunther revealed some intimate news about one of their eminent friends. "Please be careful, John," Allen warned him. "We're on a nine-party line" . . . "Oh, they don't know the lady," said Gunther . . . "Yes, they do," Allen assured him. "Just ask them. Go ahead and ask them" . . . Then they heard eight clickings—eight Carmel telephones being hung up.

Shelley Winters, who first won the attention of the critics in "Double Life" and was elevated to stardom in her newest picture, "Larceny," is one of the most ambitious actresses in Hollywood. Miss Winters recently was invited to the office of a producer who wanted to interview her for a role . . . "Don't go," she was advised by a friend. "He's a wolf" . . . "But I hear the part is a wonderful one," said Miss Winters . . . "But he's a rough operator," the actress was warned. "He's been known to tear a lady's clothes" . . . "I can take care of myself," said Miss Winters. "I'll go—and wear an old dress."

Symon Gould, vice presidential candidate on the American Vegetarian Party ticket, received a reply from G. B. Shaw regarding Shaw's deviations from a vegetable diet. Shaw wrote that both his parents and many of his friends, such as Sidney Webb, were hard workers and lived long despite the fact that they ate meat. He added that any vegetarian faced with illness would call for insulin, liver extract and thyroid stimulants, counter to the vegetarian position of natural hygienic methods. Shaw also said, "The so-called simple life is beyond the means of the poor."

Luther Adler, the stage and screen actor, went to a plastic surgeon to have his nose altered. The surgeon, who had seen Adler give many exciting performances in Broadway plays, shook his head and advised against an operation. Adler studied his face in the mirror and asked "Why not?" . . . "Because it would change your character," said the doctor . . . Adler studied his face again and said: "Wherever you see character—cut it off."

Truman Wants to Oust Leahy

By Drew Pearson

President Truman has been privately turning on the heat to ease out his chief of staff, 73-year-old elder statesman Admiral William D. Leahy.

LEAHY

Mr. Truman, who hates to fire anyone himself, recently called in Leahy's close friend, Admiral Louis Denfeld, chief of naval operations and the man who really runs the Navy. Addressing Denfeld as "Lou," though he usually calls him "Admiral," Truman said:

"Lou, I want you to do something for me. I want you to ask Leahy to retire.

"I like the old man," the President continued, "but he's outgrown his usefulness. I just hate to do this, but you can find a way of suggesting it to him. When I first came here, he offered to resign and I said no. Then last year he offered to resign again, and I asked him to stay. So it's very embarrassing to me and I can't very well ask him myself."

Admiral Denfeld, who has known Leahy all his life, demurred.

"I suppose Secretary Forrestal has been telling you that I have two votes in the joint chiefs of staff—mine and Leahy's," he said. "But just look at the record. You'll find Leahy voted against me most of the time."

"He's gotten too reactionary," countered the President. "He and George Marshall are hardly on speaking terms. Everything Marshall proposes, Leahy tears to pieces. Clark Clifford tells me the public reaction to him is bad."

Denfeld replied that he didn't see how he could possibly ask Admiral Leahy to retire.

"He's my superior," he said, "and I can't go to him with a proposal like that."

"Well, figure out some big job we can give him," countered the President. "I want him to retire in a blaze of glory. After his career he deserves it. Think up some important mission we can send him on—something really important."

Admiral Denfield promised to look into the matter; came back a few days later with the idea that Admiral Leahy be appointed United States Ambassadror to Spain. Leahy had already served as Ambassador to France and Governor of Puerto Rico, has something of a diplomatic background and Truman was delighted with the idea. However, he overlooked the fact that we have no diplomatic relations with Spain, and have agreed not to appoint an Ambassador until the Franco government is recognized by the U. N.

This fact was promptly brought to Mr. Truman's attention when he suggested that Leahy become Ambassador to Spain. The State Department was emphatic and adamant. No Ambassador, it said—not even Admiral Leahy—would be sent to Madrid.

Mr. Truman is still looking for a job for Admiral Leahy.

Rosenman's View

Sagacious Judge Sam Rosenman of New York, who used to write speeches for both Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry Truman, gave a private diagnosis of Truman's campaign talks the other day that would have delighted the ears of Dewey forces.

Chatting with a close friend, Rosenman declared: "I don't know who is writing this stuff the President has been delivering from the platform, but it will lose him more votes than he will win.

"In my opinion, the President is harping on that Wall-Street-against-the-farmer and capital-against-labor theme too heavy. That type of appeal doesn't register any more, except maybe with the Wallaceites. The farmers are too well off this year to be frightened by Wall Street."

Ferguson Says Thomas Letter Is 'Politics'

By The Associated Press

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said yesterday that a letter written to him by Senator Thomas (D., Okla.) last February is now being used in a "warmed-over political attack against me."

Ferguson said any insinuation that he threw champagne parties, with Detroit business concerns footing the bill, or that members of his family received gifts from the firms, were a "bunch of damned lies."

Thomas wrote Ferguson last February saying that if Ferguson persisted in inquiring into Thomas' commodity markets speculation, then the "private affairs and financial transactions" of other Senators should be looked into also.

This letter was made public at the time. Published reports have said that Thomas also wrote another letter in which he dwelt in more detail on what he termed the relations of Ferguson or his family with business concerns.

Ferguson said he received such a letter but "tossed it into the waste basket." He denied he had called off the probe into Thomas' dealings in commodities because of the letter.

Ferguson said the incident is being used in an effort to defeat him for reelection this fall.
